OBERT E. TOD, COMMISSIONER OF IMMIGRATION, PETITIONER, vs.

EJWA WALDMAN AND HER THREE MINOR CHILDREN, ZENIA, BESSIE, AND SOPHIA

WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT

INDEX

a Minutes of Hearings, August 30, 1922

KS—107.
Names of aliens:
Waldman, Szejwa 32f widow.
Pesia 12f child.
Sosia 9f " Zenia 7f "

Before a board of special inquiry held at Ellis Island New York Harbor, August 30, 1922

Present—Messrs. O'Connor (Chmn.), Travis, and Lovejoy.
Int. Volovick.
Cannot read. Ph. Def. LPC. Bishara, Insp.
S. I. 47. SS. "France," French. Aug. 28, 1922. Embarked at Havre, Aug. 19, 1922.

ALIEN, being sworn sworn, testified:

All born and always lived at Proskurow, Province of Podolia, Russia, where we have no relatives.

Cannot read. Tested class 5-1608, Yiddish. (By Insp. Travis: Reads some of the words and repeats to interpreter without looking at the text, but cannot make any connecting thought). My married brother, Libe Lisker, in the United States, paid our passage.

I am a white goods seamstress since my husband's death. Never in the United States before.

Going to my brother at 141 Chester Avenue, Providence, R. I.: no money: no ticket. Going to join my three brothers, Libe, Chaim, and Israel, and three sisters, Bella, Leah, and Feige, all sisters and one brother being married, and remaining in the United States permanently.

b Medical certificate =3651, dated 8-28-22, for Zenia Waldman, 7f, manifest No. 6-21. This is to certify that the above-described person has this day been examined and is found to be afflicted with dislocation of left hip, with shortening of left leg and lameness, which may affect ability to earn a living. In our opinion the condition herein certified might have been detected by competent medical examination at the foreign port of embarkation.

(Sgd.) R. C. FAUGHNAN & M. REYNOLDS.
Surgs.

She has Polish passport for four persons issued at Warsaw, Poland, on December 12th, 1921, and visaed at Warsaw, Poland, by the American consul on July 14, 1922, with notation "Four persons born in Russia," and authorized by department, April 7, 1922.

Never debarred or deported from the United States or Canada.

Q. Have any of you ever been inmates of a charitable institution?
A. No.

Q. How have you and your children been maintained since your husband's death?

A. I was working as a seamstress.

Q. Did you earn sufficient to support yourself and your children?

A. Yes.

Q. Why was it necessary for your brother to pay your passage to the United States?

A. I couldn't save enough money for passage out of my earnings.

Q. How long has your brother been in this country?

A. Brothers and sisters are in this country from twelve to thirty years.

Q. Did they notify you to come here and bring your children with you with the assurance that they would provide for you and send your children to school?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever attend school yourself?

A. I attended a Jewish religious school for about two years where they were teaching how to pray.

Q. Have your children ever been in attendance at school prior to coming here?

A. The oldest child was; the others weren't to school yet.

Q. What do you expect to do here to maintain yourself and children?

A. To continue working as a seamstress.

Q. And who would care for your children while you would be at work?

A. My brother's wife.

Q. Your child Zenia is certified as being lame. How long has she been in that condition?

A. She was born that way.

To the Child ZENIA:

Q. How old are you?

A. Seven years.

Q. Have you never attended school?

A. No.

To the Child PESIA:

Q. How old are you?

A. Twelve.

Q. How long did you attend school?

A. One year.

Q. Can you read?

A. Yes.

Q. How much did you pay for your passage to the United States?

A. $114.00 for each full ticket. The younger two children came on half tickets.

Q. How much did you pay for the half ticket?

A. $57.00 for the half ticket.

Q. Does that include the head tax?

A. Yes, everything included from Warsaw to New York. They charged one full ticket for the two small children. I had no other payment to make.

Q. Why did they charge you $114.00 for your daughter Pesia, when there was no head tax?

A. I don't know. This was the charge I had to pay.

Q. Are you leaving the country of your last permanent residence to avoid persecution on account of your religious belief or your race?

A. I left my native town seventeen months ago as soon as I could after series of pogroms in my town three years ago.

Q. Have you had any pogroms or persecutions practices in your native town since that time?

A. There were no more pogroms, but there was on two occasions a general looting of Jewish property.

Q. Then you didn't leave your native town on account of persecutions because of your religion or race?

A. We were all in fear of repetition of pogroms and twenty-five of my relatives in that town were killed at that time.

A. How long ago?

A. Three and one-half years ago.

Q. Were you or your children ever molested in your native town prior to leaving for the United States?

A. No, except that I had to hide with my children on several occasions during these pogroms.

By Inspector TRAVIS.

Q. When you left your native town seventeen months ago, to what place did you go?

A. To Eastern Galicia, Lemberg.

Q. Was there any religious persecution there?

A. No.

By Mr. LOVEJOY:

Q. Were you asked by the agent of the steamship company or by the American consul prior to your embarkation whether you were able to read or not?

A. No; in either place I was only asked to sign my name. I was not asked to read.

By CHAIRMAN:

Q. Were you asked by the agent of the steamship company to pay anything in addition to the regular scheduled fare?

A. No.

WITNESS, being duly sworn, testified in English:

Q. What is your name and address?

A. Harris Lisker, Providence, R. I., 141 Chester Avenue.

Q. For whom do you appear?

A. My sister and brother and my sister's children [names aliens].

Q. How long have you been in the United States?

A. For thirty years.

Q. Are you a citizen?

A. Yes.

(Shows naturalization certificate issued to Harris L. Lisker by the United States District Court in the District of Rhode Island, held at Providence, 3rd day of October, 1894, with the seal of the court and signature of the clerk affixed.)

Q. In what business are you engaged?

A. Working as a agent for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Q. What is your salary?

A. About $3,000 a year.

Q. Have you money saved?

A. Yes, about $1,800; some in the bank, in the Union Trust, and some in Liberty bonds. Haven't got the bank book with me.

Q. Have you any property?

A. Yes; the house where I reside.

Q. What is that worth?

A. $8,000.

Q. How much mortgage against it?

A. $2,600.00.

Q. Have you deeds with you?

A. No.

Q. Did you notify your sister to come to the United States and bring her children?

A. Yes.

Q. Where is her husband?

A. I think he died about six or seven years ago.

Q. Are you married?

A. Yes; wife and eight children, all self-supporting.

Q. What can and will you do for your sister and her children if they are admitted?

A. I will take care of them.

Q. You will take them to her home, provide for them all, find suitable employment for your sister and assure the board that the children will be sent to school until they reach the age of sixteen and not be sent to work unsuited to their years?

A. Yes.

WITNESS, being duly sworn, testified in English:

Q. What is your name and address?

A. Hyman Lisker, 424 Public Street, Providence, Rhode Island.

Q. For whom do you appear?

A. My sister, brother, and sister's children [names aliens].

Q. How long have you been in this country?

A. Fifteen years.

Q. Are you a citizen of the United States?

A. No.

g Q. Have you applied for first papers?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you got them with you?

A. No.

Q. When did you take out your first papers?

A. I don't remember when. I obtained these papers in Providence, in the United States District Court.

Q. How are you employed?

A. Collector of real-estate rents.

Q. What is your salary?

A. Thirty-five dollars.

Q. Have you any money saved?

A. Yes, in the National Exchange Bank, with a balance of about $800.00.

A. No.

Q. Married?

A. No.

Q. With whom are you living?

A. Boarding.

Q. Have you been contributing toward the support of your sister and her children?

A. Yes; all the time.

Q. How much have you sent to her in all?

A. About $1,200.

Q. What can and will you do for your sister if they are admitted?

A. Support them.

Q. Do you assure this board that you will take and provide for your sister, send the children to school until they reach the age of sixteen and see that they are not sent to work unsuited to their years?

A. Yes.

ALIENS, recalled.

Q. If you should be denied admission to the United States and the Secretary of Labor should allow a refund of the passage money paid for yourself and your child Zenia, where and to whom would you desire this refund made?

A. To the Hebrew Society at Warsaw, at No. 34 Muranowska.

h By Inspector TRAVIS:

I move that the oldest alien be excluded as a person unable to read and Zenia Waldman be excluded as a person suffering with a physical defect, defect being of such a nature that it may affect ability to earn a living, and all aliens excluded as likely to become a public charge, and assisted aliens.

By Mr. LOVEJOY:

I second the motion.

By CHAIRMAN:

I make it unanimous.

To aliens: You have been excluded by this board as a person unable to read and your child Zenia has been excluded as suffering from a physical defect, defect being of such a nature that it may affect ability to earn a living. You have all been excluded as persons likely to become a public charge, and as assisted aliens. You have the right to appeal to the Honorable Secretary of Labor at Washington for a review by him of this proceeding as to whether you shall be admitted or debarred. His decision is final. Do you wish to appeal?

A. Yes.

The Secretary may, in his discretion, order a refund of the passage money paid for yourself and child Zenia. In that event the refund will be sent to you at the address given. If deported, you will be returned to the country whence you came, by the first available ship of the line which brought you here, in the same class in which you arrived, and without any expense to yourself. Do you understand your rights?

A. Yes.

1 In United States District Court

Writ of habeas corpus

The People of the United States of America to the Commissioner of Immigration, Greeting:

We command you that you have the bodies of Szejwa Waldman and her three minor children, Zenia, Bessie and Sophia by you imprisoned and detained as it is said, together with the time and cause of such imprisonment and detention by whatsoever name the said Szejwa Waldman and her three minor children Zenia, Bessie and Sophia are called or charged, before one of the judges of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, in the General Post Office Building, Park Row, N. Y. City, on the 26th day of September, 1922, at 10:30 A. M. to do and receive what shall then and there be considered concerning the said Szejwa Waldman and her three minor children, and have you then there this writ.

Witness, Honorable Edwin L. Garvin, U. S. District Judge, the 23rd day of September, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-two.

ALEX. GILCHRIST, Clerk.

Writ allowed this 23rd day of September, 1922.

EDWIN L. GARVIN, U. S. D. J.

O'BRIEN, MALEVINSKY & DRISCOLL,

Attorneys for Petitioner, Office and P. O. Address, 1482 Broadway, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

2 United States District Court, Southern District of New York.

In the matter of the application of Szejwa Waldman, et al. for a writ of habeas corpus.

Petition for writ of habeas corpus

To the United States District Court in and for the Southern District of New York:

The petition of Szejwa Waldman, respectfully shows to this court, as follows:

That Mrs. Szejwa Waldman and her three minor children, Zenia, Bessie and Sophia are unlawfully deprived of their liberty without due process of law by R. E. Tod, the commissioner of immigration for the port of New York; and that said detention is without any authority whatsoever. And your petitioner further states that the said Szejwa Waldman and her three minor children hereinbefore named, having embarked in France for the United States, arrived at the port of New York and were sent to the Ellis Island immigrant station on or about the 28th day of August, 1922, and were there detained by the said commissioner of immigration on the ground that the said Szejwa Waldman and her three minor children were liable to become public charges if admitted to the United States and also because said Szejwa Waldman was an illiterate person.

3 Your petitioner further states that said Szejwa Waldman appealed to the Department of Labor from the decision of the commissioner of immigration at Ellis Island and that the United States Department of Labor directed the said commissioner to reopen the case before a board of special inquiry for the purpose of according her a reexamination regarding her ability to read in Hebrew or in Yiddish, and in the event of her failure to pass the test the commissioner at Ellis Island was directed to proceed to deport the Waldman family without further reference of the case to the department.

Your petitioner submits herewith a copy of the letter containing said instructions and signed by E. J. Henning, Assistant Secretary of Labor. Your petitioner further states that said Szejwa Waldman was reexamined and that although she is able to read and write in Yiddish the said commissioner has declared her to be illiterate and has ordered her and her three children to be deported on the next sailing which your petitioner believes to be Monday, September 25th, and has refused to allow an opportunity of appeal to the Department of Labor from the erroneous decision of the examining officer.

And, your petitioner further states that the said Szejwa Waldman and her family are seeking admission to the United States to avoid religious persecution in the country of their last permanent residence, namely Russia; that said Szejwa Waldman was ordered to be shot by the Russian authorities, but that she escaped and later made her way to France, and on the application of United States Senator Le Baron B. Colt she was allowed to come to the United 4 States; that petitioner was obliged to wait seventeen (17) months in Poland to secure her passport, which was not signed until December 12, 1921, and which was not viséed until July 14, 1922. Petitioner left her home town (Proskurow, Province of Podoler, Russia), in August, 1921, after having escaped from prison where she was placed by her persecutioners. On the very day she escaped from prison there was a pogrom, as a result of which two (2) of her husband's cousins were killed; and that if she is deported from the United States she will be finally returned to Russia where she will be in danger of death on account of her religious faith; and that the said Szejwa Waldman is exempt from the operation of the illiteracy test, which claim has not heretofore been submitted to or considered by the commissioner of immigration pursuant to rule four (4), subdivison five (5) of the immigration rules.

Your petitioner states that the relatives of Mrs. Szejwa Waldman in the United States are willing and eager to furnish a bond that the Waldman family will not become public charges; that said relatives are willing and able to support the Waldman family; that John Lisker, of Providence, Rhode Island, is a cousin of Mrs. Waldman, and that said Lisker and his wife are taxed for approximately $150,000 in the State of Rhode Island, and are willing entirely to support the Waldman family.

Your petitioner therefore states that the said Waldman family has not had a full and fair hearing, and that it has been deprived of the opportunity to submit evidence and witnesses showing the right of the said Waldman family to enter the United States and has been deprived of the right of final appeal to the Department of Labor.

5 Wherefore, your petitioner prays that a writ of habeas corpus may be issued to the said R. E. Tod, commissioner of immigration at Ellis Island, and that the said Szejwa, Zenia, Bessie, and Sophia Waldman may be discharged from such restraint.

SZEJWA WALDMAN.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR.
OFFICE OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY.
Washington, September 15, 1922.

55265/59

Honorable LEBARON B. COLT.
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: With reference to your interest in the case of Szejwa Waldman and three children, permit me to inform you that their exclusion is not due solely to the likelihood of their becoming public charges. The woman is unable to read and is not exempt from the operation of the illiteracy test. The child Zenia, is physically defective in that she is afflicted with dislocation of the left hip, with shortening of the left leg and lameness. The entire family falls within the category of "assisted aliens," their passage having been paid by the woman's brother, Libe Lisker.

In order, however, that no injustice may be done the aliens, the department has directed the commissioner of immigration at Ellis Island to reopen the case before a board of special inquiry for the purpose of according the woman a reexamination as to her ability to read in Hebrew or in Yiddish. In the event she fails to pass the test the commissioner at Ellis Island will proceed with their deportation without further reference of the case to the department.

Very truly yours,

E. J. HENNING,
Assistant Secretary.

7 United States District Court

Return to writ of habeas corpus

[Title omitted.]

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK, ss:

John M. Legans, being duly sworn, says that he is and during all the times herein mentioned has been an immigrant inspector in the service of the United States; that he is attached to the law department of the Immigration Service of the United States at Ellis Island, New York, N. Y.; that he in his official capacity is authorized to make and in behalf of the respondent hereby makes the following return to the writ of habeas corpus herein.

In compliance with the directions of this court, the body of the said alien in his own proper person is produced herewith before this court at the time specified in the writ.

It is respectfully urged that upon its face the petition upon 8 which the writ was granted is insufficient in law and that the writ should therefore be quashed because

(a) The petition does not allege facts to show that the proceedings of the Department of Labor upon which was issued the warrant of deportation, pursuant to which the said alien is held, were not regular, fair, and in compliance with the statute applicable in such cases, nor facts from which the court can determine that the proceedings were either irregular, unfair, or not in compliance with said statute.

(b) The petition does not allege any facts which entitled this court to review the findings and conclusion of the Department of Labor upon which the warrant of deportation was issued.

(c) It is not alleged that there was no evidence before the Department of Labor upon which it based or could have based its findings and conclusion in accordance with which the warrant of deportation was issued.

(d) It does not appear by allegations of facts that the issues sought by the petition now to be litigated in this court have not already been determined by the Department of Labor adversely to the said aliens in proceedings which were regular, fair, and in compliance with the statute applicable thereto.

As appears by the records of the Department of Labor of the United States with respect to the above-named aliens, copies of which are produced and filed herewith as part of this return:

(1) The aliens herein arrived at the port of New York on the 28th day of August, 1922, and on the 30th day of August,
9 1922, were duly accorded a hearing before a board of special inquiry held at Ellis Island, New York Harbor, New York. Upon said hearing proceedings were had, testimony taken, and other evidence introduced as more fully appears by the minutes of said hearing, a copy of which is hereto annexed and made a part of this return. Upon the hearing a medical certificate was introduced in evidence which certified that the alien Zenia Waldman was afflicted with dislocation of left hip, with shortening of left leg and lameness, which may effect ability to earn a living. The board thereafter duly and unanimously excluded the eldest alien as a person unable to read and Zenia Waldman as a person suffering from a physical defect, the defect being of such a nature that it may effect ability to earn a living, and all aliens excluded as likely to become a public charge and assist aliens.

(2) That the aliens were informed of their right to appeal to the Secretary of Labor and that his decision would be final. The record was duly forwarded to the Department of Labor on appeal and after carefully considering the evidence the Second Assistant Secretary directed that the case be re-opened before a board of special inquiry and that the woman be given a re-examination as to her ability to read both in Hebrew and Yiddish, and that if she fails, that all be deported without further reference of the case to the department.

(3) That in pursuance to said order the aliens herein were given another hearing before a different board of special inquiry and the minutes of the prior hearing being made a part hereof additional proceedings were had, testimony taken, and other evidence 10 introduced as more fully appears by the minutes, a copy of which is hereto annexed and made a part hereof. At this hearing no test was given class 5 1653 Yiddish and Hebrew class 5–5681; and the alien failed to read. The board duly and unanimously reaffirmed its former opinion of exclusions; that thereafter and, to wit, on September 22, 1922, the record of the rehearing was duly forwarded to the Department of Labor with instructions that their deportation would be proceeded with in accordance with the department's instructions.

(4) As appears by the minutes and exhibits aforesaid, the said aliens were duly informed and apprised of the charges against them; that said aliens were afforded a full, complete, and fair hearing by the Department of Labor upon said charges; the said aliens were afforded a full, complete, and fair opportunity to answer and to submit evidence upon such charges; there was before the Department of Labor evidence to sustain each of said charges; the Department of Labor duly found that the charges were sustained; and said charges were in fact fully sustained by the proofs that were before and were considered by the Department of Labor.

(5) The proofs and record of the proceedings before mentioned having been duly transmitted to him, the Secretary of Labor, after carefully considering the evidence presented in the record, duly affirmed the excluding decision of the board and directed the deportation of the aliens herein; and for the cause of the detention of the said aliens complained of in the petition herein, deponent says that the said aliens are and since the receipt of said writ of habeas corpus have been held under and in obedience to said writ.

11 Respondent respectfully denies any knowledge or information thereof sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations in the petition, except as to what is specifically admitted in the return filed herein.

Wherefore, deponent prays that the writ of habeas corpus herein be dismissed and the said aliens remanded to the custody of the commissioner of immigration at Ellis Island, New York, N. Y., to be dealt with in accordance with the said order of exclusion.

Order Allowing Appeal

[Title omitted.]

On reading the petition of Szejwa Waldman and her three minor children, Zenia, Bessie, and Sophia, made by O'Brien, Malevinsky &

Driscoll, their attorneys on their behalf, dated September 29, 1922, for appeal and consideration of the assignment of errors presented therewith, it is Ordered, that the appeal herein be allowed as prayed for, and it is Further ordered, that the judgment appealed from be stayed until the hearing and determination of said appeal, and it is Further ordered, that a certified transcript of the record and all proceedings be transmitted to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Dated, New York, September 29, 1922.

J. W. MACK,
Judge of the United States Circuit Court.

16 In United States District Court

Assignment of Errors

[Title omitted.]

Now come the relators in the above-entitled cause and file the following assignment of errors upon which they will rely upon the prosecution of the appeal in the above-entitled cause, from a decree made and entered herein in this court on the 28th day of September, 1922:

1. That the court erred in dismissing the writ of habeas corpus herein, and in not discharging the petitioner and her three children, pursuant to the petition submitted in support of the writ.

2. That the court erred in not granting the writ and submitting the case to the commissioner of immigration for a rehearing on the question as to whether or not the alien was a refugee in accordance with the provisions of section one of the immigration laws, and 17 in accordance with the provisions of paragraph "C" of subdivision five, of rule four, of the immigration laws.

3. That the court erred in not granting the writ, and in not holding that the petitioner had been deprived of her rights to a fair and impartial trial through a refusal on the part of the immigration authorities to grant her an appeal from the second hearing had on the question of her illiteracy.

4. That the court erred in not granting the writ on the ground that the relators would not become public charges in accordance with the findings of the immigration authorities because of the expressed willingness of the relatives to the relators to support and maintain them.

5. That the court erred in dismissing the writ, and directing that the relators be remanded to the custody of the commissioner of immigration and deported.

Whereas, by the law of the land, the said writ of habeas corpus should have been sustained and the relators-appellants should have been released from the custody of Robert E. Tod, commissioner of immigration at the port of New York, the appellee herein, the said Szejwa Waldman and her three minor children, Zenia, Bessia, and Sophia, appellants, by their attorneys O'Brien, Malevinsky & Driscoll, and William A. 23 In United States Circuit Court of Appeals, for the Second Circuit

No. 202—October term, 1922. Argued February 23, 1923. Decided March 20, 1923

United States of America, ex rel. Szejwa Waldman, and her three minor children, Zenia, Bessie, and Sophia, relators-appellants, against
Robert E. Tod, Commissioner of Immigration at the Port of New York, respondent-appellee

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York. Before Hough, Manton, and Mayer, circuit judges

Opinion

Appeal from an order of the District Court for the Southern District of New York dismissing a writ of habeas corpus and remanding the realtors to the custody of the commissioner of immigration at the port of New York.

The petition of Szejwa Waldman alleged that she and her children were seeking admission to the United States to avoid 24 religious persecution in Russia, the country of their last permanent, that she escaped in August, 1921, and ultimately made her way to France but was obliged to wait seventeen months in Poland to secure her passport, which was not signed until December 12, 1921, and was not viséed until July 14, 1922. She further alleged, because of incidents set forth, that if she were deported from the United States she would be finally returned to Russia, where she would be in danger of death on account of her religious faith. She set up in her petition that she was exempt from the operation of the literacy test and also that she had not a full and fair hearing before the immigration authorities. The return to the writ set forth that the aliens arrived at New York on August 28, 1922, and that on August 30, 1922, a hearing was accorded to them before a board of special inquiry held at Ellis Island, New York Harbor; that a medical certificate was introduced in evidence which certified that the daughter Zenia was afflicted with dislocation of the left hip and shortening of the left leg and lameness, which might affect her ability to earn her living. It was further alleged that the board unanimously excluded the mother as a person unable to read, the daughter Zenia as a person suffering from a physical defect of such nature that it might affect her ability to earn a living and that all the aliens should be excluded as likely to become a public charge and as assisted aliens. The return further alleged that due procedure was had and that the aliens received a full and fair hearing. Accompanying the return and as a part thereof were the minutes of hearings held before boards of special inquiry on August 30, 1922, and September 19, 1922.

The following appears from the minutes of August 30, 1922. Szejwa Waldman was examined and testified that she and her children had always lived at Proskurow, Russia, and that her departure from Russia was because of religious persecution. Her ability to read was tested in Yiddish. The test is not set forth nor described; but the record contains an observation by Travis, one of the members of the board of special inquiry, "Reads some of the words and repeats to interpreter without looking at the text, but can not make any connecting thought." Szejwa Waldman further stated that she was a white goods seamstress, that her married brother had paid her passage and that she was going to her brother in Providence, where she would join three brothers and three sisters. A medical certificate was introduced in evidence which certified to the physical condition of Zenia, as set forth in the return. It further appeared that one of Szejwa Waldman's brothers had been contributing to the support of her and her children from time to time. Two brothers testified and from their testimony, it appears that each was in comfortable circumstances and each was willing and competent to take care of the relators. At the conclusion of the hearing the board unanimously decided that the mother should be excluded as a person unable to read and Zenia should be excluded as a person suffering from a physical defect which might affect her ability to earn a living and all relators should be excluded as likely to become a public charge and assisted aliens.

This decision was stated to the aliens and they were informed that they had the right to appeal to the Secretary of Labor and they stated that they desired so to appeal.

On September 18, 1922, the chief deporting officer at Ellis Island received the following letter signed by H. R. Landis, Assistant Commissioner:

"Bureau Letter of September 15th directs in the case of Szeiwa Waldman and children, S I 47, 88, "France," August 28th, that the case be reopened before the board of special inquiry and the woman be given a reexamination as to her ability to read in both Hebrew and Yiddish, if she so chooses, and in case she fails to pass the test that they all be deported without further reference of the case to the department."

There is no copy in the record of the Bureau Letter of September 15th. A hearing was had before the board of special inquiry. The first board had consisted of Inspectors Connor, Travis, and Lovejoy. The second board consisted of Inspectors Connor, Scarlett, and Parker. The examination of the second hearing is very brief and is here set forth.

"Q. What is your name?

"A. Szejwa Waldman.

"Q. You arrived on the SS. "France" accompanied by your three children who are present?

26 "Q. Your case has been reopened by authority of the bureau to reexamine you as to your ability to read both Hebrew and Yiddish. Can you read in either language?

"A. I read a little, and I will soon learn more if given an opportunity.

"Q. In what language can you read a little?

"A. Yiddish.

"(Test given Class 5–1654 Yiddish and Hebrew Class F–5681; failed to read.)

"By Mr. SCARLETT. I move that the former decision be affirmed.

"By Mr. PARKER. I second the motion.

"By Mr. CONNOR. I make it unanimous.

"(Alien informed of reexclusion for reasons given at the former hearing.)"

The aliens were not informed of their right to appeal to the Secretary of Labor and no appeal was taken. The aliens were then ordered deported and hence this writ.

O'Brien, Malevinsky & Driscoll (Laurence L. Cassidy and William A. Needham, of counsel), for relators-appellants.

William Hayward, United States attorney (James C. Thomas, Asst. United States attorney, of counsel), for appellee.

MAYER, Circuit Judge:

Preliminary it is important to point out that this return fails to set for the details of the test applied either at the first or second hearing.

Section 3 of the immigration laws clearly distinguishes between Hebrew and Yiddish. It provides, inter alia, as follows:

"That after three months from the passage of this act, in addition to the aliens who are by law now excluded from admission into the United States, the following persons shall also be excluded from admission thereto, to wit:

27 "All aliens over sixteen years of age, physically capable of reading, who can not read the English language, or some other language or dialect, including Hebrew or Yiddish: * * * That for the purpose of ascertaining whether aliens can read the immigrant inspectors shall be furnished with slips of uniform size, prepared under the direction of the Secretary of Labor, each containing not less than thirty nor more than forty words in ordinary use, printed in plainly legible type in some one of the various languages or dialects of immigrants. Each alien may designate the particular language or dialect in which he desires the examination to be made, and shall be required to read the words printed on the slip in such language or dialect." [Italics ours.]

From the foregoing, it is evident that the Congress realized that there is a distinction between Hebrew, a classic language, and Yiddish. At the hearing of August 30, 1922, the mother was tested solely in Yiddish. The department instructions contained in the letter of September 19, 1922, ordered a reexamination as to the mother's ability in both Hebrew and Yiddish. For this double test, there is no warrant in the statute and anyone familiar with these two languages knows that a person of the type of this relator might be able to read Yiddish and unable to read Hebrew. It will be observed also that, although the mother in her examination of September 19, 1922, stated that she could read a little in Yiddish, the board nevertheless reported that they examined her in both Hebrew and Yiddish.

This procedure in itself was contrary to the requirements of the statute and deprived relators of a hearing which to have been fair must, at least, have been in accordance with the statute. As other cases of this general character may arise, it is desirable to point out, also, that in making returns it should appear whether or not the details of the statutory test were conformed with. The statement that the test was given is not enough. "Class 5–1654" conveys no information to the court. There should, at least, be an understandable description of the test actually made by the Board and 28 of the respects in which the immigrant failed to read, so that the courts may be informed from the record as to whether or not the hearing was in accordance with statutory requirements. Both in the original hearing and in the reexamination the minutes on this point set forth merely the conclusions of the boards of special inquiry as to the tests and not the facts upon which those conclusions were based.

It is also important that the alien be clearly informed of his or her right to designate the particular language or dialect in which he or she desires the examination to be made.

But there is a much more serious defect in this proceeding which goes to a question of jurisdiction.

Section 17 of the immigration laws (noted in the margin) is cautious to provide an absolute and fair right of appeal so that the exclusion of the alien shall not rest solely upon the determination of a board of special inquiry. In order to carry out the administrative requirements of this section, Rule 17, containing various subdivisions has been promulgated.

Subdivision 1 of rule 17 provides:

"Subdivision 1. Informing alien as to right of appeal. Where an appeal lies the alien shall be informed of his right thereto, and the fact that he has been so informed shall be entered in the minutes."

Subdivision 9 of the same rule provides:

"Subdivision 9. Reopening of cases: Whenever a case is referred back to a board by the bureau or the department in order that additional evidence may be taken, such case is thereby reopened; and after the new evidence has been taken the board shall render a new decision, in which it may in its discretion reaffirm, alter, or reverse its previous decision. The mere action or referring back a case under such circumstances is not to be taken as an indication of any disapproval by the bureau or the department of the board's decision or of what the new decision should be."

29 Subdivision 11 of the same rule provides:

"Subdivision 11. Procedure in reopened cases: The hearing in a case reopened before a board of special inquiry shall be of the same nature and be subject to the same conditions, limitations, and privileges as an original hearing before such a body."

It is plain that both within the intent of the statute and in accordance with the rules made in pursuance thereof, subdivision 11, supra, is here controlling. Subdivision 9 provides for the taking of additional evidence, and thereby the reopening of the case, "because obviously a previous record is incomplete" and then requires the board to render "a new decision" after the "new evidence" has been taken and it is made clear that the board is not to be controlled in its new decision by the fact that the case is referred back to the board by the bureau or the department. Obviously it is not the original decision but the new decision which determines whether or not the alien shall be excluded. Such decision is clearly appealable under section 17 of the statute, and if there were any doubt whatever on that point, subdivision 11 of rule 17, supra, has made the procedure entirely clear.

In the case at bar the effect of the letter from Assistant Commissioner Landis, based on the bureau letter of September 15, 1922, was to inform the board of special inquiry that no appeal was necessary and that the board's decision would be final.

The point upon which Szejwa Waldman was to be examined and which was to determine whether or not she and her children were to be excluded was the vital question of her ability to read in conformity with the requirements of section 3 of the statute.

If she had been informed of her right to appeal (rule 17, subd. 1) and had she appealed, it would doubtless have been realized by the bureau at Washington that the ruling laid down in the letter of Assistant Commissioner Landis was contrary to the statute, as pointed out supra, or the bureau might have con-

30 cluded that the actual test was not properly given. The point is that this relator was deprived of the vital protection of appeal which the statute and the rules have set up to insure a fair hearing for such applicants in accordance with law.

There is a letter attached to the petition for the writ written by Assistant Secretary of Labor Henning to United States Senator Colt. We must disregard this letter as not being a part of the record, which we have the power to review. But, referring to the letter merely for argumentative purposes, it is interesting to note that the language used by the Assistant Secretary is that the department had directed that the case be reopened "for the purpose of according the woman a re-examination as to her ability to read in Hebrew or in Yiddish."

It remains only to state that the record leaves the case of Zenia in a position where it must be assumed that the decision to exclude her was not affirmed by the Department of Labor, and the department may very well have disagreed with the local board as to whether or not the physical defect would interfere with the ability of Zenia to earn a living.

The fate of the mother and the three children was placed entirely upon the question as to whether or not she could read Hebrew and Yiddish.

While it seems to us that the reading test applied was not in accordance with the statute, we prefer to rest our decision upon the failure to accord to these relators an opportunity to appeal, and this failure we regard as a fatal jurisdictional defect which renders the order of deportation void.

In view of the foregoing, it is unnecessary to discuss the contention that the record shows that relators left their last permanent residence because of religious persecution and hence that illiteracy was not a bar under section 3 of the statute.

The order below is reversed, and the district court is instructed to enter an order sustaining the writ and discharging relators.

NOTE.—"Section 17. That boards of special inquiry shall be appointed. * * * Each board shall consist of three members. * * * Such boards shall have authority to determine 31 whether an alien who has been duly held shall be allowed to land or shall be deported. * * * Such boards shall keep a complete permanent record of their proceedings and of all such testimony as may be produced before them: and the decisions of any two members of the board shall prevail, but either the alien or any dissenting member of the said board may appeal through the commissioner of immigration at the port of arrival and the Commissioner General of Immigration to the Secretary of Labor, and the taking of such appeal shall operate to stay any action in regard to the final disposal of any alien whose case is so appealed until the receipt by the commissioner of immigration at the port of arrival of such decision, which shall be rendered solely upon the evidence adduced before the board of special inquiry. In every case where an alien is excluded from admission into the United States under any law or treaty now existing or hereafter made, the decision of a board of special inquiry adverse to the admission of such alien shall be final, unless reversed on appeal to the Secretary of Labor * * *."

Petition for rehearing

To the Judges of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit:

The petition of Robert E. Tod, commissioner of immigration at the port of New York, by William Hayward, United States attorney for the Southern District of New York, respectfully shows:

This cause was argued at the present term on the 23rd day of February, 1923, before Judges Hough, Manton, and Mayer. On March 20, 1923, the opinion written by Judge Mayer and 35 concurred in by Judges Hough and Manton was filed. Upon the opinion, it was decided that the order below dismissing the writ of habeas corpus and remanding the relators be reversed and that the district court be instructed to enter an order sustaining the writ and discharging the relators.

The reversal is based upon the view that the appellants were denied a fair hearing in accordance with the statute, in that there is no provision for a double test as to an alien's ability to read; that the record was devoid of any details showing that the statutory reading tests were complied with, and that there was a serious defect which goes to the question of jurisdiction, the appellants being deprived of the vital protection of appeal which the statute and the rules have set up to insure a fair hearing.

The respondent-appellee now respectfully applies for a rehearing upon the appeal, for the following reasons:

POINT I

This court erred in instructing the district court to enter an order sustaining the writ and discharging relators. The court should have remanded the cause to the district court for trial of the merits.

The court is respectfully referred to the case of Ng Fung Ho, otherwise known as Ung Kip, and others, Petitioners vs. Edward White, as commissioner of immigration for the port of San Francisco (decided in the United States Supreme Court—October Term, 1921—36 No. 176, the opinion being delivered by Mr. Justice Brandeis, on May 29, 1922—United States Supreme Court advance sheets), which indicates that the practice to be pursued by the United States courts, where by virtue of unfair hearings such courts are called upon to exercise jurisdiction under habeas corpus, instead of discharging the appellants, the court should remand the cause to the district court in order that that court might take evidence upon the question of the right of the appellants to enter the country under the Chinese exclusion laws and the immigration laws.

In the Ng Fung Ho et al. vs. White case (supra), the Supreme Court's view upon this point is indicated in the closing portion of its opinion:

"It follows that Gin Sang Get and Gin Sang Mo are entitled to a judicial determination of their claims that they are citizens of the United States; but it does not follow that they should be discharged. The practice indicated in Chin Yow vs. United States, supra, and approved in Kwock Jan Fat vs. White, 253 U. S. 454, 465, should be pursued. Therefore, as to Gin Sang Get and Gin Sang Mo, the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is reversed and the cause remanded to the District Court for trial in that Court on the question of citizenship and for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion."

In the Chin Yow vs. United States, 208 U. S. 8, case, the Supreme Court, at page 13, said:

"The courts must deal with the matter somehow, and there seems to be no way so convenient as a trial of the merits before the judge."

37 And in the Kwock Jan Fat case, 253 U. S. 454, at page 465, the court, after having decided that the Circuit Court of Appeals should have held that the petitioners had not been granted a fair hearing in conformity with due process of law, said:

"The practice indicated in Chin Yow vs. United States, 208 U. S. 8, is approved and adopted, the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is reversed, and the cause is remanded to the district court for the trial of the merits."

It is respectfully contended that if the judgment of this court in the instant case be carried into effect, it would result in the admission into the country of aliens notwithstanding their right to enter has not been subjected to the actual test of the Immigration Statute.

For the above reasons, it is respectfully prayed that the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit modify its order so that the trial court may proceed to determine the admissability of the appellants here involved.

Respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM HAYWARD,
United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, Attorney for Respondent-Appellee.

JAMES C. THOMAS,
Assistant United States Attorney, of Counsel.

Opinion on petition for rehearing

PER CURIAM:

Upon this petition for a rehearing submitted by the United States Attorney, attention is called to Chin Yow vs. United States, 208 U. S. S. at page 13, Kwock Jan Fat vs. United States, 253 U. S. 451, at page 465 and to the recent decision of Ng Fung Ho otherwise known as Ung Kip, and others, petitioners vs. Edward White, as Commissioner of Immigration for the Port of San Francisco, decided May 29, 1922.

40 It is undoubtedly the law, that, generally in a habeas corpus proceeding on behalf of a Chinaman the Chinaman is entitled to a judicial hearing for the reason that, in these cases, the relator claims admission to the United States as a citizen thereof. In a non-Chinese immigration case, however, the applicant for admission is not entitled to a judicial hearing, unless perchance, (a point which has not arisen) he should claim citizenship. The result is that on appeal in habeas corpus of an alien, such as the relator in the case at bar, we can do no more than examine into the regularity or irregularity of the proceeding. If, as here, we find the proceeding was not in accordance with law, the result is that the relator is discharged from custody. A determination of this character is not, however, res adjudicata and does not, in any manner, prevent the United States or its appropriate officials from again beginning proceedings against such an alien as this relator. The effect of our decision is merely to discharge the relator from custody because the particular proceeding complained of was not in accordance with law. The order entered upon our mandate will not prevent the beginning of an appropriate proceeding, if the Government is so advised.

For the reasons outlined, the petition for rehearing is denied.

ROBERT E. TOD, COMMISSIONER OF IMMIGRATION, petitioner,
v.
SZEJWA WALDMAN, ET AL. } No. ____

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT, AND BRIEF IN SUPPORT THEREOF.

Comes now the Solicitor General of the United States and on behalf of petitioner prays the Court to grant a writ of certiorari to review the judgment of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit entered in the above-entitled cause.

QUESTION INVOLVED.

The question presented is whether when a court, on habeas corpus, finds that an alien has been denied a fair hearing by the immigration officials, it thereupon becomes the duty of said court to discharge the alien or proceed to determine his right to enter the United States under the immigration laws.

52071—23

THE FACTS.

Petitioners were excluded from admission into the United States because one of them was unable to meet the reading test prescribed by the immigration statutes; one was afflicted with a physical defect, and the others were likely to become public charges. (R. p. 9.) They thereupon sued out a writ of habeas corpus, alleging various grounds of unfair hearing, unnecessary to set forth here, inasmuch as they do not affect the determination of the question involved. After a hearing the writ was dismissed, and petitioners thereupon perfected an appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals. That court reversed the judgment below, and directed that the trial court "enter an order sustaining the writ and discharging relators." An application for rehearing was filed on the ground, in substance, that the judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals should have directed the trial court to determine the right of the aliens to enter the United States instead of summarily discharging them from custody. The rehearing was denied, the court saying, in part:

> It is undoubtedly the law, that, in a habeas corpus proceeding on behalf of a Chinaman, the Chinaman is entitled to a judicial hearing for the reason that, in these cases, the relator claims admission to the United States as a citizen thereof. In a non-Chinese immigration case, however, the applicant for admission is not entitled to a judicial hearing, unless perchance (a point which has not arisen) he should claim citizenship. The result is that on appeal in habeas corpus of an alien, such as the relator in the case at bar, we can do no more than examine into the regularity or irregularity of the proceeding. If, as here, we find the proceeding was not in accordance with law, the result is that the relator is discharged from custody. A determination of this character is not, however, res adjudicata and does not, in any manner, prevent the United States or its appropriate officials from again beginning proceedings against such an alien as this relator.

ARGUMENT.

The apparent error of the Court of Appeals in the case here involved lies in its assuming that an alien applying to enter the United States on the ground of citizenship is entitled to a judicial determination of that fact on habeas corpus, while an alien claiming the right to enter upon some other ground is not entitled to such a hearing of his right to enter in the event he is denied a fair hearing by the immigration officers, and for that reason is able to obtain a writ of habeas corpus. This Court has made no such distinction. The practice of requiring the trial court, in the event it found, on habeas corpus, that an alien had been denied a fair hearing, to go further and determine the right of such alien to enter the United States, finds its genesis in Chin Yow v. United States, 208 U. S. 8, 13, wherein it was said:

> The petitioner then is imprisoned for deportation without the process of law to which he > is given a right. Habeas corpus is the usual remedy for unlawful imprisonment. But, on the other hand, as yet the petitioner has not established his right to enter the country. He is imprisoned only to prevent his entry and an unconditional release would make the entry complete without the requisite proof. The courts must deal with the matter somehow, and there seems to be no way so convenient as a trial of the merits before the judge. If the petitioner proves his citizenship, a longer restraint would be illegal. If he fails, the order of deportation would remain in force.

The practice there established was adhered to by this Court in Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276, and Kwock Jan Fat v. White, 253 U. S. 454, 457.

The foregoing opinions indicate that the fact of claimed citizenship was not controlling, but rather accidental. Inasmuch as the same finality attaches to the finding of citizenship by the immigration officers in the case of an alien applying to enter as attaches to the finding of any other fact by such officers (Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276, 282), it would be illogical and without legal basis to assert, as appears to have been done by the Circuit Court of Appeals in the case at bar, that when habeas corpus is issued on the ground of unfair hearing, the court will go further and determine the right of the alien to enter if based upon claimed citizenship, but will refuse to determine the right to enter if based upon some other ground; that its duty in the latter case, upon a finding of unfair hearing, is to immediately discharge the alien from custody. Such a practice can only result in confusion and difficulty.

It is respectfully submitted that the writ should issue as hereinbefore prayed for.

v.
SZEJWA WALDMAN ET AL. | No. 95.

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT

BRIEF ON BEHALF OF PETITIONER

STATEMENT

This case is before the court on a writ of certiorari granted at the last term. Respondent and her three minor children, all aliens, were accorded a hearing by the immigration officers upon their application to enter the United States. As the result of the hearing all of the aliens were excluded, one upon the ground she was unable to read; another because afflicted with a physical defect affecting her ability to earn a living, and the remaining two as aliens likely to become public charges. (R. p. 11.) A rehearing was ordered by the Department of Labor, but said rehearing failed to work any change in the order of exclusion. (R. p. 12.) The aliens thereupon sued out a writ of habeas corpus, alleging various grounds of unfair hearing, which are of no importance here, because not now in issue. After a hearing the writ was dismissed. (R. pp. 12 and 13.) On appeal the Circuit Court of Appeals reached the conclusion that the aliens had not been accorded a fair hearing, principally because they were not given an opportunity to appeal to the Secretary. The order of the trial court was therefore reversed with directions to sustain the writ and discharge the aliens. (R. pp. 21 and 22.) A rehearing was applied for in the Circuit Court of Appeals upon the ground that its order of reversal should have directed the trial court to proceed to determine the case on the merits, that is to say, to determine whether the aliens were entitled under the immigration laws to enter the United States. (R. p. 23.) Petition for rehearing was denied, however, in an opinion which declares, in substance, that a judicial hearing on the merits can only be had where the alien claims admission to the country on the ground of citizenship. (R. p. 25.)

QUESTION INVOLVED

Concisely stated, the sole question here presented is whether a trial court, upon satisfying itself in habeas corpus proceedings that an alien has been accorded an unfair hearing by the immigration officials, should merely order the discharge of the aliens or proceed to determine the right of the aliens to enter the United States under the immigration laws.

ARGUMENT

The dominant error of the Circuit Court of Appeals in the case at bar lies in its apparent misinterpretation of the decisions of this court declaring the practice which should be followed by the trial courts in disposing of alien cases on habeas corpus. The proper practice finds its genesis in Chin Yow v. United States, 208 U. S. 8, 13, which, it is true, involved the application of a Chinese person to enter the United States on the ground of citizenship. A careful analysis of the opinion in that case, however, will quickly disclose that it was not the fact of claimed citizenship which caused this court to direct a trial of the merits, but the fact that here was a person applying to enter the United States who had not yet established that right. The following excerpt from this court's opinion in that case confirms this view (p. 13):

> The petitioner then is imprisoned for deportation without the process of law to which he is given a right. Habeas corpus is the usual remedy for unlawful imprisonment. But on the other hand as yet the petitioner has not established his right to enter the country. He is imprisoned only to prevent his entry and an unconditional release would make the entry complete without the requisite proof. The courts must deal with the matter somehow, and there seems to be no way so convenient as a trial of the merits before the judge. If the petitioner proves his citizenship a longer restraint would be illegal. If he fails the order of deportation would remain in force.

Observe also the following injunction of this court in that case (p. 11):

> Of course if the writ is granted the first issue to be tried is the truth of the allegations last mentioned. If the petitioner was not denied a fair opportunity to produce the evidence that he desired, or a fair though summary hearing, the case can proceed no farther.

And again at page 13:

> But unless and until it is proved to the satisfaction of the judge that a hearing properly so called was denied, the merits of the case are not open, and, we may add, the denial of a hearing cannot be established by proving that the decision was wrong.

In other words if the trial court should find in the above case that the hearing had been fair, it must treat as final and not open to judicial review the claim of citizenship.

The practice there outlined has been approved by this court in the subsequent cases of Kwock Jan Fat v. White, 253 U. S. 454, 465, and Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276, 285. To the same effect are Hoey Lum Qung v. Johnson, 299 Fed. 246, 247, 248, and Wong Wing Sing v. Nagle, 299 Fed. 601.

It inevitably follows from the foregoing decisions that, where the trial court on habeas corpus finds the alien has not been accorded a fair hearing, it is its duty to determine the right of the alien to enter the United States, and this duty exists not only where the right of entry is based upon claimed citizenship but equally where the right of entry is based upon the claim, as here, that the alien is able to meet the literacy or other requirements of the immigration laws.

It is respectfully submitted that the judgment below should be reversed and the cause remanded to the District Court for trial of the merits. Kwock Jan Fat v. White, 253 U. S. 454, 465.

Supreme Court of the United States,

ROBERT E. TOD, COMMISSIONER OF IMMIGRATION, Petitioner, vs. SZEJWA WALDMAN AND HER THREE MINOR CHILDREN, Respondents.	October Term 1924 No. 95

BRIEF FOR RESPONDENTS.

This cause is here on Certiorari to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, to review a determination of that Court, (289 F. R. 761), discharging the four relators in Habeas Corpus proceedings from an excluding determination under the Immigration Laws (Record, p. 23, fol. 33). As pointed out by the lower Court in its opinion on rehearing, its determination does not preclude the Government's beginning appropriate proceedings for deportation (Record, p. 25, fol. 40), to wit, under the Secretary of Labor's warrant of deportation, issuable under Sec. 19 of the Immigration Act of Feb. 5, 1917 (Pearson vs. Williams, 202 U. S. 281)^ The sole ground for the application for the Certiorari was whether the Court ought not to have remitted the case to the District Court for further proceedings there, instead of discharging relators without prejudice to other administrative proceedings, and that, of course, is the sole point open to the Government. (Alice Bank vs. Houston Co., 247 U. S. 240.) Respondents are, however, of course free to sustain the order appealed from on any ground open under the record (Camp vs. Gress, 250 U. S. 308, 318; Air Works vs. Bridgewater Co., 132 F. 16 C. C. A.).

[illegible]

Statement of Facts.

Relators arrived at Ellis Island August 28th, 1922, after embarkation at Havre on August 19th, 1922, (Record, pp. 1 and 11), and their place of birth and last permanent residence was the town of Proskurow, in the province of Podolia, Russia, (Record, p. 1), which province is part of the Ukraine (Ency. Britannica, 1922; Vol. 32, being Vol. III of the Supplement, pp. 829-30; Statesman's Year Book for 1921, p. 1252; New International Year Book 1920, p. 379). They consist of Mrs. S. Waldman, 32 years of age, and her three daughters, aged 12, 9 and 7 respectively, and all their testimony was given through an interpreter (Record, pp. 1a, 2). All four were born and always lived at Proskurow (p. 1), until about April, 1921, when they left that town 17 months before arrival here, fearing repetition of pogroms there, in which 25 of her relatives were killed in 1919 (p. 3). They lived thereafter temporarily in Eastern Galicia (p. 3). Mrs. Waldman's husband died about six years before her arrival in this country (p. 4; compare p. 1), and she has since both in their native town and in Galicia supported herself and her three children as a seamtress, earning enough even there to maintain them all (p. 2), but not enough to pay the considerable sum required for passage money, which was sent to her by brothers and sisters in this country (p. 2). She has three brothers and three sisters living here, who have been here from 12 to 30 years, all ready and able to aid her and her children, and to give assurances that the children will go to school (pp. 1, 2). Two of these testified before the Board of Special Inquiry. One was Harris Lisker of Providence, R. I., a U. S. citizen, married, having a salary of $3000 per year as agent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and owning real estate here, and having $1800 saved (pp. 3-4). Another was Hyman Lisker, also of Providence, R. I., who has been here fifteen years and is a collector of rents, with $800 saved. The Habeas Corpus petition also refers to John Lisker of Providence, a cousin of Mrs. Waldman's, who with his wife are taxed for approximately $150,000 in Rhode Island, and are also willing to support the family (p. 9), all being ready to give bonds against their becoming public charges (p. 9).

One of the children, Zenia Waldman, age 7, is lame, which is the meaning of the medical certificate (Record, p. 1) that she is "afflicted with dislocation of left hip, with shortening of left leg, and lameness, which may affect ability to earn a living," the latter qualification being of course without significance on ability to support herself, except in the case of a person thereafter shown by evidence before the Board of Special Inquiry to be following such occupation as acrobat or the like.

statutory right of appeal to the Secretary, as the Court below also held. The record fails to show what the matter was that she was called upon to read. It merely stated at the first hearing:

> "Cannot read. Tested class 5-1608 Yiddish (By Insp. Travis: Reads some of the words and repeats to interpreter without looking at the text, but cannot make any connecting thought" (Record, p. 1).

The method of administering the test is considered under Point III (post, p. 52).

In a recent case (U. S. ex rel Friedman vs. Tod, 296 F. R. 888) the same Circuit Court of Appeals properly held that the matter selected for the reading test, as there disclosed, did not meet the statutory requirement of > "words in ordinary use"

and non-constat that this was the case here, too.

On the appeal in the instant case, the Secretary of Labor directed a new literacy test to be administered to Mrs. Waldman in both Yiddish and Hebrew—for which there is no warrant in the statute—and also unlawfully directed that "in case she fails to pass the test, that they all be deported without further reference of the case to the department" (Record, pp. 6-7, compare 10). She was accordingly, tested in both Yiddish and Hebrew, and they were all ordered excluded anew, and not advised of their statutory right to appeal anew (Record, pp. 5, 7). Without apparently passing on the very strong evidence in the record, bringing relators within the exemption of the "religious refugee" provision of the literacy test—on which the Board made no finding pro or con—the mother was excluded as illiterate, Zenia Waldman as a person suffering with a physical trouble which may affect ability to earn a living, and all as "likely to become public charges and assisted aliens" (pp. 5, 7). Of course, if the mother be excluded, there would be justification for regarding the young children as excludable, as likely to become public charges, but not otherwise, and they would also be within the spirit of the provision (Sec. 3) excluding "all children under sixteen, unaccompanied by or not coming to one or both of their parents, except that any such children may, in the discretion of the Secretary of Labor be admitted" etc. The Secretary of Labor, accordingly made the case turn—as indicated by a letter he wrote to U. S. Senator Colt, who interested himself in the case—on the question of literacy (Record, p. 10), practically eliminating the "likelihood to become a public charge" issue, and the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals also so treated it (pp. 21-2). In fact there is no evidence in the record of an affirmance on appeal by the Secretary of any excluding decision, though this is jurisdictional. The evidence on the issues other than the literacy test and its exemption clause is further analyzed post Point IV and shown to be insufficient in law to justify exclusion. The Court of Appeals properly held that the opportunity to appeal anew was improperly withheld, and also that the record failed to show a proper administration of the literacy test (pp. 19-22).

Strangely enough, however, the Circuit Court of Appeals refused to pass, as unnecessary, on the question whether relator Mrs. Waldman was within the religious refugee exemption of the literacy test, (though in that event, there was no authority to apply the test at all), saying (Record, p. 22):

> "In view of the foregoing it is unnecessary to discuss the contention that the record shows that relators left their last permanent residence because of religious persecution, and hence that illiteracy was not a bar under section 3 of the statute."

The evidence as to religious persecution in the record, elicited from Mrs. Waldman, through an interpreter, is as follows (Record, p. 3):

> "Q. Are you leaving the country of your last permanent residence to avoid religious persecution on account of your religious belief or your race? A. I left my native town seventeen months ago (April 1921) as soon as I could after a series of pogroms in my town three years ago.
>
> Q. Have you had any pogroms or persecutions practices in your native town since that time? A. There were no more pogroms, but there was on two occasions a general looting of Jewish property.
>
> Q. Then you didn't leave your native town on account of persecutions because of your religion or race. A. We were all in fear of repetition of pogroms and twenty-five of my relatives in that town were killed at that time.
>
> Q. How long ago? A. Three and one-half years ago. (Feb. 1919.)
> Q. Were you or your children ever molested in your native town prior to leaving for the United States? A. No, except that I had to hide with my children on several occasions during those pogroms."

She was also asked the irrelevant questions, in view of the express reference in the Act to "religious persecution in the country of their last permanent residence":

Q. When you left your native town, seventeen months ago, to what place did you go? A. To Eastern Galicia, Lemberg.

Q. Was there any religious persecution there? A. No.

The evidence is corroborated by the fact that she holds a passport, issued in Poland December 12, 1921 (Eastern Galicia having become part of Poland), visced by the U. S. Consul at Warsaw by special authorization of the State Department April 7, 1922 (Record, p. 1). Delays in securing visee of passports and limitation of immigration under the Quota Law—relators not being within the classes thereby preferred—as also difficulties till lately in transmitting money to the former Russian dominions, of course accounts for much of the lapse of time, both before and since relators left Proskurow in April 1921. It is also well known that by special intermediation of the League of Nations and philanthropically disposed persons, Galicia afforded a temporary refuge to refugee Jews from Russia and Ukraine, despite her own home difficulties.

The Petition in the Habeas Corpus Proceedings (Record, p. 9) directly invokes the religious persecution exemption of the statute, and alleges that Mrs. Waldman was ordered to be shot by the Russian authorities, but that she escaped, and later made her way to France; also that she escaped from prison, where she was placed by her persecutors, and that on the very day of her escape from prison, two of her husband's cousins were killed, and that if she is deported, she will finally be returned to Russia, where she will be in danger of death on account of her religious faith. It further alleges that the claim of exemption from the literacy test was not passed on by the immigration authorities.

Matter To Be Noticed Judicially or Provable Before the Secretary.

As a matter of fact, the pogroms directed at the Jews in the Ukraine, and particularly that of Proskurow of February 1919, have attracted so much attention, that the general facts should be noticed judicially. This is in accord with the decisions of this Court, as to the courts' taking judicial notice of "what every one is supposed to know" and the history of our time, and refreshing their recollection by resort to appropriate authorities and it will be observed post (pp. 36-8) that in construing the analogous exemption of religious and political refugees found in the British Aliens Act of 1905, from which our exemption was avowedly taken, it was expressly stated that "common fame" as to persecutions abroad should be taken into account, and the Home Secretary's instruction expressly referred to "the present disturbed condition of certain parts of the Continent."

The treatment of the Jews in the Ukraine, and the pogroms that occurred there between 1917 and 1922, are well summarized in a cablegram in the N. Y. Times of Sept. 16, 1924, on the basis of a Ukrainian Government Commission report, as follows:

> "The Jewish population, which number in Russia over 6,000,000 live scattered except in the Ukraine and White Russia regions, where they are more concentrated because in old C'zarist Russia these regions formed a sort of ghetto for the Russian Jewry, who had been forbidden to live in the majority of Russian towns and in entire rural districts.
> The revolution freed the Jews from the oppression of the C'zar's regime, but the intervention and civil war which followed, subjected the Jews to greater sufferings than any other section of the Russian population. White Russia and the Ukraine both became theatres of war.
>
> The civil war in the Ukraine witnessed a succession of eighteen Governments, each of which considered fostering national hatred as the best policy to dissipate discontent. Numerous bandit groups following each other made the Jews the scapegoat in their struggle against the Reds. Official figures collected by the Ukraine Government Committee, who investigated the loss of life and property caused by the intervention and civil war show that there occurred in the Ukraine region 1,235 pogroms, wherein 70,000 Jews were killed, over 500,000 driven from their homes and 200,000 children rendered orphans. A great number of houses were demolished, while a number of small towns and villages were entirely destroyed. Several towns experienced more than twenty pogroms."

Compare New International Year Book for 1920 (published 1921), (p. 379):

> "Jews-Ukraine: There were insistent reports of the continuation of anarchy in the Ukraine. The Jewish community of America had tragic evidence in the murder of the two martyrs, Israel Friedlaender and Bernard Cantor, the former a member of the Joint Distribution Committee. At the close of the year there did not seem to be any indication that conditions were likely to improve in the near future, and the only hope for the restoration of order and civilized life in Southwestern Russia lay in the setting up of a constitutional government, answerable to the influence of the public opinion of the rest of the world."

New International Year Book for 1921 (published 1922), says at p. 397:

> "The Jewish population of the Ukraine had suffered undescribable hardships. Persons of all classes, including the wealthiest were reduced to beggary and it was reported that there was hardly a single Jewish child under seven years of age left in the Ukraine. Probably twice as many Ukraine Jews had died from exposure or disease as had been massacred."

The word "pogrom" used above and in the record is defined in the "Century Dictionary," Vol. XII, as follows:

> "In Russia an organized massacre, particularly a massacre of Jews that is countenanced more or less openly by the officials. The pogroms are attributed by Mr. Lucien Wolf, a well known and responsible writer, to direct > Governmental action. They were, however, carried out by the assistance of local mobs, animated by intense prejudice, if not by superstition. Athenaeum, Jan. 26/27, p. 99."

Perhaps a description given by Mr. Trevelyan in the British Parliament on April 18, 1905 (British Parliamentary Debates, 4th Series, Vol. 145, p. 703) is still more apt:

> "We know that in Russia now and for many years there has been practically licensed mob violence against the Jewish population, which may break out anywhere and at any time, which is not in any way restricted by the police, but in many cases is obviously sanctioned and encouraged by them."

In the section dealing with Ukraine, the American Jewish Year Book for successive years, reports the following happenings:

American Jewish Year Book for 1919-1920 (pp. 286-9), (covering year from June 1918 on):

p. 287: Feb. 15 (1919) Podolia. Terrible pogroms in many places, lasting 7 days. Many Jews killed and hanged.

March 7: Proskurow: Yiddish Morgenpost of Vienna reports 400 Jewish families massacred in pogrom.

p. 289, April 18, Husiatyn and Fastov: 2500 Jews killed or wounded; at Popniaska, 250 Jews are killed.

May 9, Zlotchev: Ukrainian troops revolt and attack Jewish shops; over 70 business places plundered.

May 30, Ananyev (Odessa district) Pogrom: 62 Jews killed; nearly all houses and shops of Jews plundered.

American Jewish Year Book for 1920-1 (pp. 277-83, covering year from June 1919 on):

(p. 277) June 2, 1919: Nearly all Jewish shops and houses in Kamenetz-Podolsk plundered and about 100 Jews killed.
Aug. 2 (Odessa): Report of 3-day massacre in Jewish quarter, from which it is reported no one escaped.
Aug. 8, Urinin: 40 Jews massacred.
Sept. 2, Zhitomir: Anti-Jewish excesses.
Sept. 5, Perevaslav: Massacre of Jews; 326 reported killed.
Sept. 22-8, Fastov (near Kiev): 1600 to 2000 killed or seriously wounded in 6-day pogrom. Over 200 houses burned down.
Sept. 26: Anti-Jewish massacre in many villages in vicinity of Kamenetz-Podolsk.
Oct. 18, Kiev: On re-entry of Denikin's troops, 3-day massacre of Jews; 400 Jews killed in this district.
Dec.: Fresh excesses.
Jan. 2 (1920), Mezhibez (Podolia): Pogrom lasts several days. Jews killed and nearly all shops and houses plundered.
Feb. 6, Korsun (Podolia): Bolsheviki execute rabbi and 12 Jewish notabilities.
Feb. 24, Zamichov (Podolia): Pogroms occur. 30 Jews killed and over 100 wounded (another attack March 18th).
March 19, Eletz: 200 persons reported killed. Many Jewesses attacked and some murdered. Dubosary: Pogrom by remnants of Denikin's army; 15 Jews killed. Moldavanka (suburb of Odessa): attacks made nightly on Jews. Bolsheviki arrest number of Jewish communal workers.

American Jewish Year Book for 1921-2 (covering year from June 1, 1920, p. 209 et seq.):

June 4 (1920), Kiev (suburb of): Peasants drive 55 Jews into synagogue, which they burn.

July 5: Prof. Israel Friedlander and Rabbi Bernard Cantor, envoys of the Joint Distribution Committee, robbed and slain by bandits.

July 23, Tonshva: Occupation by Petlura, followed by anti-Jewish riots. Crowded synagogue burnt.

Oct. 1: Eleven towns in the province of Kiev and seven in the province of Volhynia suffer heavily from pogroms.

Nov. 17: Federation of Ukrainian Jews of London informed by Jewish National Committee, Warsaw, of series of fresh pogroms throughout the Ukraine by Soviet-Russian forces and Petlura's followers.

Dec. 24, Proskurow, Krassilov, Micolayev and Tshorniostrov: Stragglers of Petlura's armies commit anti-Jewish atrocities. Ekaterinoslav: Pogrom lasting 6 days carried out by Makhno's gangs. Hundreds of Jews killed and thousands wounded.

April 24 (1921): Outbreak of pogroms in government of Homel by gangs of criminals, the band of Goliaka.

May 6 (1921), Dubrovno: Massacre of Jews assumes enormous proportions.

Zhitomir: Pogrom activities of Ataman-Struk confirmed.

As it happens, the very pogrom at Proskurow of Feb. 1919, which Mrs. Waldman testified to, has been described at length (pp. 39-43; 202-227), in a published work containing an investigation of the Ukrainian pogroms, conducted by the Russian Red Cross Association, entitled

> "The Slaughter of the Jews in the Ukraine in 1919", by Elias Heifetz (N. Y., 1921)

from which the following is summarized:

Proskurow is a town in the government of Podolia, with a population of 50,000, about half Jews.

About three weeks before the Proskurow massacre, a convention of the Bolsheviki of the province of Podolia took place in Vinnitza, at which Bolsheviki uprisings on Feb. 15th throughout the province were decided upon. In Proskurow, two regiments were quartered, with definite Bolshevik tendencies, who announced that they would not interfere. More than 1200 persons were killed in Proskurow and environs, and out of 600 wounded, more than 300 died . . . "It was the sad function of Proskurow to establish a new phase in the technique of pogroms. Previous pogroms had as their chief purpose, robbery, that is, the stealing of Jewish property; murders followed the looting, but still they were not the principal purpose. . . . Beginning with Proskurow, the basic purpose of the pogroms in Ukraine appears as the total destruction of the Jewish population. Looting was also widely practised, but it took second place . . . In Proskurow, only Jews were massacred" (p. 227).

In U. S. Senate Document No. 611 of the 63rd Cong., 2nd Session (1914) entitled "Illiteracy Among Jewish Immigrants and Its Causes" a paper was reprinted, prepared by Mr. Goldberg of the Petrograd bar in which the following item occurs concerning this very town as it was ten years ago (p. 18):

> "Proskurow, Province of Podolsk. Jewish population 80 per cent. The city schools maintained exclusively by the income derived from the Jewish population. In 1911 not only was admittance refused to Jewish children, but 20 Jewish pupils who had previously attended the Government schools, were discharged. In the year 1912 not a single Jewish child was admitted to the Government schools."

It was shown in the same document that this educational discrimination against the Jews of Russia was so serious that the First All-Russian Conference of Primary Education held in St. Petersburgh in January 1914 adopted resolutions of protest against the same (pp. 9-10). Private Jewish schools could not be adequately substituted, even apart from the economic distress among the Russian Jews, because necessary permits for opening them were repeatedly withheld (pp. 19-20), and because the Russian Governmental policy opposed them for girls (p. 8). Even when opened, the necessary certificates of residence were repeatedly withheld from the teachers, and if the language of instruction therein was Russian, the teacher was subject to prosecution, and the same was the case, if Yiddish was the medium of instruction (p. 21).

STATUTE AND REGULATIONS APPLICABLE.

The Literacy Test Clause of Sec. 3 of the Act of 1917, in enumerating the excluded classes, reads as follows:

> "All aliens over sixteen years of age, physically capable of reading, who can not read the English language or some other language or dialect, including Hebrew or Yiddish: Provided, That any admissible alien, or any alien heretofore or hereafter legally admitted, or any citizen of the United States, may bring in or send for his father or grandfather over fifty-five years of age, his wife, his mother, his grandmother, or his unmarried or widowed daughter, if otherwise admissible, whether such relative can read or not; and such relative shall be permitted to enter. That for the purpose of ascertaining whether aliens can read, the immigrant inspectors shall be furnished with slips of uniform size, prepared under the direction of the Secretary of Labor, each containing not less than thirty nor more than forty words in ordinary use, printed in plainly legible type in some one of the various languages or dialects of immigrants. Each alien may designate the particular language or dialect in which he desires the examination to be made, and shall be required to read the words printed on the slip in such language or dialect. That the following classes of persons shall be exempt from the operation of the illiteracy test, to wit: All aliens who shall prove to the satisfaction of the proper immigration officer or to the Secretary of Labor that they are seeking admission to the United States to avoid religious persecution in the country of their last permanent residence, whether such persecution be evidenced by overt acts or by laws or governmental regulations that discriminate against the alien or the race to which he belongs because of his religious faith . . ."

Rule 4, Reading Test, of the Secretary of Labor's Immigration Regulations reads:

> Subdivision 1. Who subject thereto and by whom examined—All aliens over 16 years of age who are physically capable of reading, except as specified in the statute and described in subdivision 5 of this rule shall be required to demonstrate their ability to read matter printed in plainly legible type and in a language or dialect designated by the alien at the time of examination.
> Subd. 2. General method of applying the reading test.—When applying the reading test, immigration officers shall use the printed and numbered slips supplied by the bureau for that purpose, and a record shall be made upon the manifest or board minutes showing both the class and serial numbers of slip used in each case and the language or dialect designated by the applicant and actually used in the examination. No two aliens listed upon the same manifest sheet shall be examined at seaports by the use of the same slip. If the examining inspector is unable to speak and understand the language or dialect in which the alien is examined, the services of an interpreter shall be used for interpreting into spoken English as read the printed matter read by the alien, so that the examining inspector may compare such interpretation with the slip of corresponding serial number containing the English translation of the same reading matter. . . .

Subd. 4. Examination by board of special inquiry.—In the event the applicant is subject to the reading test and is unable to satisfy the examining or challenging of his ability to read matter printed in the designated language or dialect, it shall be the duty of either the examining or challenging inspectors to detain the applicant for special inquiry and to record upon the manifest and detention cards, for the information of the board, the class and serial numbers of the slip used in the primary examinations. Applicants so detained shall be examined by boards of special inquiry as to their ability to read, in the same manner as aliens detained for special inquiry upon other grounds. The examination shall be conducted as prescribed in subdivisions 1 and 2 of this rule, and the result shall be noted in the recorded minutes.

Subd. 5. Exemptions.—The following classes of aliens over 16 years of age are exempted by law from the illiteracy test or from the "operation," viz: . . .

(c) Persons seeking admission to the United States to avoid religious persecution in the country of their last permanent residence. . . .

Subd. 6. Method of determining right to exemption.—All claims to exemption from the operation of the illiteracy provisions of the Immigration Act shall be made the subject of careful inquiry by the examining inspector, who, if he is not convinced that the applicant is entitled to exemption, shall detain him for investigation by a Board of Special Inquiry. In all cases in which the exemption claimed is not fully established before such board the alien, if illiterate, shall be debarred.

Subd. 7. Proof of exemption.—Clear and convincing proof of claims of exemption from the illiteracy test shall be required in every instance.

POINT I.

The Circuit Court of Appeals properly discharged relators without prejudice to further administrative proceedings (1) because administration of a literacy test in a foreign language was involved, a non-judicial function, (2) because the statute authorizes submission of proof of exemption from the test because of religious persecution direct to the Secretary of Labor, and (3) because the record indicates that a much more satisfactory hearing can be had before the Secretary of Labor in warrant proceedings.

(a) As relators were absolutely admissible and exempt from the literacy test as religious refugees, as further argued hereinafter, the order below was correct.

It will be observed that the Circuit Court of Appeals in its opinion, expressly refrained from deciding pro or con, whether the evidence did or did not exempt Mrs. Waldman from the literacy test altogether as a religious refugee (Record, p. 22). (Of course, her children are concededly exempt, under the statute, because under 16.) But if relators are religious refugees, there was no authority to administer the literacy test at all.

In the subsequent case of

> U. S. ex rel Boxer vs. Tod, 294 Fed. Rep. 628,

the same Circuit Court of Appeals held that the District Court had properly ordered relator's discharge, where the Board of Special Inquiry had failed to interrogate an alleged illiterate Jewish immigrant from Russia as to his reasons for coming over, unless a new hearing were had, in which this exemption were gone into. In distinguishing an earlier case, in which the immigrant had testified she came over to be married (U. S. ex rel Ghersin vs. Commissioner, 288 F. R. 756 C. C. A.), the Court, speaking by Judge Rogers said:

> "All this court decided was that, in view of the general inquiry as to her reason for leaving, the board was not bound to ask expressly whether she left to escape religious persecution. In the instant case no such general question had been asked and the board had no information whatever before it upon that subject, and without such information it could not determine whether the applicant was or was not subject to the illiteracy test. But while upon the facts disclosed upon this record, we sustain the right of the judge to send the matter back for a further hearing, we are unable to sustain the order he made directing the immigration officials to discharge the relator from custody."

In the present case, while a very superficial examination was made of Mrs. Waldman on the religious refugee question, the Board of Special Inquiry failed to adjudge pro or con, whether they are religious refugees or not (Record, p. 5). It is submitted that the recent decision of this Court in followed and applied by it in Mahler vs. Eby, 264 U. S. 32 is in point, holding that where the right of a utilities commission to change contract rates is dependent upon a finding that subsisting rates are unjust, there must be an express finding to that effect, to sustain increased rates.

See also

and the instant case on the other points involved. Here the questions put by the Board of Special Inquiry furthermore clearly indicate that it had no comprehension of the real scope of the religious refugee exemption.

(b) Counsel for Respondents concede that, in general, where an unfair hearing before the immigration authorities is shown, the Federal Courts should conduct the further hearing themselves under Sec. 761 U. S. Rev. St., and so completely dispose of the case themselves, especially as the courts have no direct reviewing authority over the immigration authorities, as pointed out in U. S. vs. Williams, 193 Fed 228, 231, by Learned Hand, J. Practical experience has shown that injustice is apt to result by referring a case back to the immigration authorities, who commonly bitterly resent an appeal to habeas corpus proceedings. This is well indicated by the case of Exp. Petkos, 212 F. R. 275, for example, where the immigration authorities, after their original error had been called to their attention, promptly ordered exclusion anew on another erroneous ground. Even respecting federal judges, who are not given to petty vanities, the rule is that a judge should not sit in review of his own decisions, if practicable (U. S. vs. Lancaster, 5 Wheaton 434; Moran vs. Dillingham, 174 U. S. 153; Van Arsdale vs. King, 152 N. Y. 69), a conclusion reached by this Court, in the first-cited case, Chief Justice Marshall writing, without a statutory provision. Similarly, where an appellate court reverses in a case tried before a referee, it is usual to order the new trial to take place before a different referee (Compare Matter of Bliss, 39 Hun. 594, and as to administrative hearings under the immigration laws, U. S. vs. Redfern, 180 F. R. 500). I agree with counsel for the Government that the circumstance that Chin Yow vs. U. S., 208 U. S. 8, 13 involved a claim to citizenship on the part of one excluded under the Chinese Exclusion Laws, is purely accidental, and will not attempt to sustain the course of the lower court on the ground assigned by it, peculiar to Chinese Exclusion cases involving claims to citizenship. This was well pointed out in non-Chinese cases as the proper course in involving one concededly an alien, affirmed by this Court without much discussion of the question in U. S. vs. Jung Ah Lung, 124 U. S. 621.

> U. S. vs. Williams, 193 F. R. 228;

Long before the decision in the Chin Yow case, but after the reviewability of the immigration authorities' decisions had been limited by statute, it was established practice for the Federal Court to take the further evidence itself, where the immigration authorities had rendered an unfair decision

Sometimes, of course, the record contains evidence making it unnecessary to hold any further hearing and justifying the appellate court's order of discharge, as in where petitioner's brief collated the chief authorities (pp. 75-6).

(c) In the instant case, however, the Circuit Court of Appeals properly discharged relators without prejudice to new administrative proceedings, because administration of a literacy test in a foreign language is involved, a non-judicial function which the Federal Courts cannot legally undertake.

Under numerous authoritative decisions, such action as administration of a literacy test in foreign languages, or supervising the same, is a non-judicial function.

In Keller vs. Potomac Co., supra, this Court held a statute unconstitutional, authorizing it to review on appeal the legislative discretion of a public utilities commission in fixing rates, saying:

> "Such legislative or administrative jurisdiction, it is well settled, cannot be conferred > on this court either directly or by appeal. The latest and fullest authority upon this point is to be found in the opinion of Mr. Justice Day, speaking for the court in Muskrat vs. U. S., 219 U. S. 346. The principle there recognized and enforced on reason and authority is that the jurisdiction of this court, and of the inferior courts of the United States ordained and established by Congress under and by virtue of the third article of the Constitution is limited to cases and controversies in such form that the judicial power is capable of acting on them; and does not extend to an issue of constitutional law framed by Congress for the purpose of invoking the advice of this court without real parties or a real case, or to administrative or legislative issues or controversies."

In Honolulu R. Co. vs. Hawaii, supra, this Court held that the legislature could not legally vest the courts with power to regulate the schedule for running cars.

In Western Union Telegraph Co. vs. Myatt, supra, Judge Hook ably collated and analyzed the authorities involved, and decisions in the various state courts are ably collated in State vs. Brill, supra, holding that courts cannot be required to prepare syllabi of cases. In Ex. p. Gans supra, Ex p. Riebeling and U. S. vs. Queen, supra, a statute requiring the federal courts to certify to the value of the services of informers in smuggling cases was held to be unconstitutional. In Housman vs. Kent, supra, it was held that the courts cannot perform such administrative duty as to appoint surveyors to examine premises to enable them to relevy a void drain tax. In Robey vs. County Commissioners, supra, it was held that courts cannot be required to approve the accounts of constables, sheriffs and other officers.

In Matter of Spingarn, 96 N. Y. Misc. Repts. 141, Surrogate Fowler held that the surrogate's court cannot be required to render such administrative function as to compute an inheritance tax on alternative theories, one of which may not occur, and while his application of the principles was disapproved on appeal in 175 N. Y. App. Div. 806, his summary of the law was there approved. He said:

> "A judge cannot be compelled to do a ministerial act. The principle to which I refer, as plainly violated by the present application, is well recognized. Judge Cooley states it, and of course with his usual accuracy, when he says: 'Upon judges, as such, no functions can be imposed except those of a judicial nature.' There are many adjudications to the same effect, only some of which need be cited. Note to Hayburn's Case, 2 Dall. 409; Haine v. Levee Commissioners, 19 Wall. 661. The New York cases are to the same effect. In People ex rel McDonald v. Keeler, 99 N. Y. 463, 480, the Court of Appeals said that although the Constitution of New York does not contain a declaration similar to that of the Constitution of the United States in regard to separation of powers, the principle was recognized in this state. In Matter of Davies, 168 N. Y. 89, 101, the Court said: 'Free government consists of three departments, each with distinct and independent powers, designed to operate as a check upon those of the other two co-ordinate branches. The legislative department makes the laws, while the executive executes, and the judiciary construes and applies them. Each department is confined to its own functions and can neither encroach upon nor be made subordinate to those of another without violating the fundamental principle of a republican form of government.'"

(d) In view of the express statutory authorization to submit proof of the exemption as to being a religious refuge direct to the Secretary of Labor, and not merely to the immigration official, the Circuit Court of Appeals properly discharged relators without prejudice to proceedings on the Secretary's Warrant, a ground here fortified by the offer, in the Habeas petition, to give bond against the aliens becoming public charges. It will be observed that the statute expressly, in the alternative, permits submission of this proof to the Secretary, and not merely to the immigration official. This was done advisedly, because it was recognized that summary board of special inquiry hearings, at which the cowed and ignorant immigrant is not permitted to have the assistance of counsel or other advisers, would often not be a satisfactory way of establishing the right to this exemption, which may turn, not merely on prosecution of the individual, but on general discriminatory laws and regulations. When this kind of exemption from the literacy test was first suggested in Congress, on June 25th, 1906, in the form of the so-called Littauer amendment which the House of Representatives adopted, both as an exception to the literacy test and the likely-to-become a public charge clause, (Cong. Record, Vol. 40, pp. 9164-7), Congressman Grosvenor criticized the amendment, which was then in a form avowedly taken from the British Alien Act of 1905, and did not enumerate the persons to whom the proof should be made. He said (p. 9166):

> "But what is religious persecution or what are religious grounds? Are we to constitute our Board of Immigration at the ports of our > country a court to try an immigrants' religious opinions?''

As is well known, the literacy test, as well as this exemption, were voted down by that Congress, the compromise being adopted that an Immigration Commission was appointed to study the question instead. After its reports were rendered, the literacy test was reported anew by the House Committee on Immigation on April 16, 1912 (House Report No. 559 of 62nd Cong., 2nd Session, April 16, 1912) as part of H. R. 22527, and now read, to meet such objections:

> Sec. 3. That the following classes of persons shall be exempt from the operation of this act, to wit (a) All aliens who prove to the satisfaction of the proper immigration officer or to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor that they are seeking admission to the United States solely for the purpose of escaping from religious persecution.

The report which accompanied the bill stated (Id. p. 2):

> "We believe that those who are fleeing from religious persecution should find a city of refuge on our shores. Hence the provision exempting immigrants of that class from the test where they are otherwise admissible."

It will be remembered that Board of Special Inquiry hearings are governed by the provisions of Sec. 17 of the Immigration Act of 1917 that

> "All hearings before such boards shall be separate and apart from the public, but the immigrant may have one friend or relative present under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Labor."

Rule 15 of the Secretary's Regulations concerning Board of Special Inquiry hearings qualifies the statute still more by adding the proviso:

> "Provided, First, that such friend or relative is not and will not be employed by him as counsel or attorney; second, that if a witness, he has already completed the giving of his testimony; third, that he is not an agent or a representative at an immigration station of an immigrant aid or other similar organization; and, fourth, that he is either actually related to or an acquaintance of the alien."

It is obvious that under such conditions, an immigrant unfamiliar with our laws and customs, nervous and cowed, and afraid to volunteer any information, and testifying through interpreters, themselves only moderately intelligent, can seldom intelligently adduce the evidence before the Board of Special Inquiry necessary to bring himself within such exemption, or to secure corroborative evidence there. In proceedings before the Secretary, for instance, under sec. 18, where counsel is permitted, the situation is quite different, however. There counsel is at hand, and evidence can be secured much more readily, and the very fact that the strict rules of legal evidence do not obtain there, makes that forum a much more satisfactory one than even a court, to establish the facts called for by the religious refugee exemption, and their corroboration. Consideration of the nature of this kind of evidence shows that, except through the application of the principle of taking judicial notice of the facts, it is very difficult to prove these facts in a court of law. Many incidents are often involved, occurring in distant places, and to many third parties, many of which may not be within the personal knowledge of the alien fleeing from religious persecution. It is very difficult also to secure corroborative witnesses so far away, having personal knowledge of the facts. The theory of the statutory exemption was that, as in the case of the English statute, these facts should be largely shown by public fame and admissible hearsay, in order to corroborate the testimony of the alien claiming to flee from religious persecution.

A somewhat similar issue, but a much simpler one, was involved with respect to the exclusion of criminals convicted of offenses involving moral turpitude under the immigration laws, as considered in U. S. ex rel Mylius vs. Uhl, 210 F. R. 860 C. C. A.

There the Circuit Court of Appeals in holding that criminal libel is not such an offense, involving moral turpitude under the Act, said:

> "The rule which confines the proof of the nature of the offense to the judgment is clearly in the interest of a uniform and efficient administration of the law and in the interest of the immigration officials as well, for if they may examine the testimony on the trial to determine the character of the offense, so may the immigrant. How could the law be speedily and efficiently administered, if an immigrant convicted of perjury, burglary or murder is permitted to show from the evidence taken at the trial that he did not commit a felony, but a misdemeanor only?"

Compare Pearson vs. Williams, 202 U. S. 281.

This is analogous to the provision in Section 3 of the Immigration Law, considered hereinbefore, as to admitting children under 16 not accompanying or going to a parent, by special leave of the Secretary of Labor only (ante p. 5). On the other hand, on the ordinary appeal to the Secretary from the Board of Special Inquiry Sec. 17 of the Immigration Law confined the appeal to the evidence taken by the Board of Special Inquiry.

Moreover, as above pointed out, the offer to give bond against the aliens becoming public charges is in terms addressed only to the discretion of the Secretary of Labor, under Section 21 of the Immigration Act, and the Circuit Court of Appeals may very properly have thought that, with the literacy question eliminated, such offer should be acted upon by the Secretary of Labor before further probably unnecessary judicial proceedings should take place. It had ample authority to take such course under Section 761 of the U. S. Revised Statutes, requiring it > "to dispose of the party as law and justice require"

Compare Mahler vs. Eby, supra.

In habeas corpus proceedings under Sec. 761, after an unfair or improper administrative hearing is established, mere unsatisfactoriness in the state of proof may justify ordering a new administrative hearing (Compare U. S. vs. Rio Grande Co., 184 U. S. 416).

POINT II.

Mrs. Waldman was exempt under the religious refugee exemption of the literacy test, and illegal and unauthorized departmental regulations constrained the immigration officials in passing upon the questions involved.

(a) It is difficult to see how the immigration authorities could have failed to sustain the contention that she and her children are religious refugees, within the exemption of the Literacy Test. She lived at Proskurow at the time of the Proskurow pogrom of Feb. 1919 in which 25 relatives of hers were killed, and she and her children had to hide to escape death. On two other occasions since then, there was a general looting there of Jewish property. She testified categorically that they were in fear of a repetition of pogroms, as well she might, and that she left as soon thereafter as she could (in Feb. 1921), seventeen months before arriving here, having taken temporary refuge at Lemberg in Eastern Galicia, pending receipt of money from here, and securing of passport and its vise, in view of our Quota Law.

The supplementary matter extracted in this brief from reliable sources (ante p. 8 et seq.) shows that these Ukrainian pogroms were among the most disgraceful and far-scaled in history, and that is particularly true of the Proskurow massacre, in which Jews alone were victims, more than 1200 Jews having been killed there out of about 25,000, and 600 wounded. The Ukrainian pogroms numbered 1235, and resulted in the killing of 70,000 Jews, and driving from their homes of 500,000 persons and rendering 200,000 children orphans. Violence against the Jews in Proskurow took upon itself such dimensions that on Dec. 24, 1920, atrocities were again made a matter of record. In the province of Podolia (Podolsk), in which Proskurow is located, and in the Ukraine in general, anti-Jewish atrocities are shown to have continued until after the family left Proskurow. Unless the statute should be construed as requiring the aliens to have sacrificed their lives before getting the benefit of the exemption, it is difficult to conceive of a case falling more clearly within the statute than this.

Of course the aliens were quite inadequately interrogated by the Board. The statute does not limit religious persecution to the form of pogroms, and the petition in habeas shows that Mrs. Waldman was actually ordered to be shot, and was imprisoned and escaped from prison, which facts an intelligent examination and interpretation would have brought out. Moreover, the statute expressly confines the inquiries to the "country of last permanent residence," so that the facts elicited as to more favorable conditions in Eastern Galicia, the district of temporary refuge, were entirely irrelevant and misleading. It will also be observed that the statute makes the "country" of last permanent residence the unit, so that the conditions in Ukraine in general down to departure should have been considered.

(b) Improper and unauthorized regulations as to the character of proof requisite have in effect nullified this exemption entirely, as shown by this case and several others recently before the courts. Subd. 7 of Rule 4 of the Regulations applicable improperly provided: "Clear and convincing proof of claims of exemption from the illiteracy test shall be required in every instance" (See p. 18 supra).

Charges to juries couched in such terms have been repeatedly disapproved of as confusing and improper, a fair preponderance of evidence only being required in civil cases, with the possible exception in some jurisdictions of cases, here inapplicable, involving fraud, reformation and specific performance, and transactions with deceased persons.

Moot vs. Business Men's Inv. Ass., 157 N. Y. 201, 211.

When issued by a superior officer having full power of removal, as here, they become all the more coercive and improper.

In Harnish vs. Hicks, supra, the Court held that it was error to charge the jury that payments must be established "by a clear preponderance of evidence," saying:

> "This was error. In a civil case the party upon whom the burden of proving the affirmative of an issue is cast, is only required to establish it by a preponderance of the evidence; it is sufficient if the weight of the evidence inclines to his side. The requirement of a 'clear' preponderance implies, and would be likely to be understood by the jury as requiring something more satisfactory, convincing and decisive than a mere inclining of the scales. Mitchell vs. Hindman, 150 Ill. 538 and cases there cited."

In Morrow vs. Campbell, supra, the Court said:

"In civil causes the proper measure of proof is reasonable conviction, or satisfaction of mind, and a charge which requires 'clear and convincing' proof of a fact exacts too high degree of proof. Wilcox vs. Henderson 64 Ala. 535."

In Thompson Co. vs. Interst. Comm. Commission, supra, five judges constituting the Commerce Court united in holding it error to exact "conclusive proof," and laid down the rule that in civil cases, complainant need never prove his case by more than a preponderance of the credible evidence.

In U. S. vs. Regan, supra, this Court, speaking by Mr. Justice Van Devanter, held that, even in civil actions for penalties, it is error to require more than "reasonable preponderance of the evidence."

Similarly, in

In Moot vs. Business Men's Investment Assn. supra, the New York Court of Appeals said:

"But it is said that the language of the contract was that the deed should convey a good and satisfactory title. Much stress is placed upon the word 'satisfactory.' We think that > word in no way changes the contract. A good title must be regarded as a satisfactory one. As was said by Chief Justice Kent, 'Nor will it do for the defendant to say he was not satisfied with his title, without showing some lawful encumbrance or claim existing against it. . . . The law in this case will determine for the defendant when he ought to be satisfied.' "

The numerous authorities construing the provision of standard life insurance policy requirements for "satisfactory" proof of death are similar (Buffalo Loan Co. vs. Knight Templar Ass., 126 N. Y. 450, 453).

In Walker vs. Collins, supra, the Circuit Court of Appeals, Caldwell and Sanborn, JJ., concurring, said:

> "In Bouvier's Law Dictionary (14th Ed.) the term 'satisfactory evidence' is defined to be that evidence which is sufficient to produce a belief that the thing is true; in other words, it is 'credible evidence.' The Century Dictionary defines 'satisfactory evidence or sufficient evidence' to be 'such evidence as in amount is adequate to justify the court or jury in adopting the conclusion in support of which it is adduced.' No better definition of these terms can be given, and it was in this sense presumably that the jury understood them."

The words of the statute "shall prove to the satisfaction" of the officials, authorizes no higher standard of proof than ordinarily; "satisfied" means the same as "find" or "believe."

Walker vs. Collins, supra;
Callan vs. Hanson, 86 Iowa 420, 422;

Sams Co. vs. League, 25 Col. 129, 135; Terra Haute Co. vs. Payne, 45 Ind. App. 132, 142.

The language is the same in form as under the Chinese Exclusion Law provision (Sec. 3 of the Act of 1892) requiring defendant to "establish by affirmative proof to the satisfaction" of such justice, judge or commissioner, etc., with the significant omission of the words "by affirmative proof" and even under that Act, this Court and the lower courts have on occasions, reversed the decision at nisi prius (Li Sing vs. U. S., 180 U. S. 486; Tom Hong vs. U. S., 193 U. S. 517; Lui Hop Fong vs. U. S., 209 U. S. 453).

In fact, it is quite clear that the terms were used in this statute so as to obviate the necessity of strict legal proof, in view of the necessity of considering hearsay evidence and "common fame" on such question as religious persecution, manifested not merely by overt acts, but by discriminatory laws and regulations.

In singular contrast to this regulation is the one promulgated in England under their Aliens Act, which may properly be considered, as our act was avowedly taken from the British one, and this Court has held that in such cases, the construction placed in such other jurisdiction is germane (Interst. Comm. Comm. vs. B. & O. R. Co., 145 U. S. 263).

Soon after the British Act was passed, Home Secretary Gladstone on March 9th, 1906, instructed the immigration boards that (Parliamentary Debates, 4th Series, Vol. 153, p. 1321):

> "he hopes that, having regard to the present disturbed condition of certain parts of the > Continent, the benefit of the doubt where any doubt exists, may be given in favour of any immigrants who allege that they are fleeing from religious or political persecution in such districts."

This regulation became the subject of a Parliamentary interpellation. Answering the same, Sir Edward Carson, late Attorney General, said (Id. pp. 1326-7):

> "He believed that the Act was one which required very great discrimination in its administration. He (Mr. Gladstone) had told the officers that in cases in which they were in any doubt as to whether the alien was a political or religious refugee, they ought to give him the benefit of the doubt. He (Sir Edward Carson) should have thought that was the duty of the immigration officers without any instructions whatever. That was an ordinary rule in the administration of all Acts of Parliament."

Lord Chancellor Loreburn, after having taken some time to consider the question, rendered the following opinion (Id. Vol. 155, pp. 669-71):

> "The Act provides that in the case of an immigrant who proves that he is seeking admission to this country in order to avoid persecution on religious or political grounds, he may be admitted even though he falls within the description of an undesirable immigrant. This cannot mean that he has to prove all the facts in regular form of law by sworn evidence, for there is no provision in the Act to allow an oath, or to empower the officer to call or swear a witness, and he has no court or anything like it. I think the Act means that the officer is to judge on the best information he can get and to make up his mind as well as he can. It is a very clumsy piece of legislation. Generally no information on the subject can be obtained except from the immigrant himself or by common fame. If in these circumstances the officer feels some doubt as to how he should make up his mind, I see no reason why he should not give the immigrant what is called the benefit of the doubt. That is my view of the construction of the Act. * * *

The Act is very much wanting in precision as a good many acts are in these days, I am sorry to say, and must be looked at fairly, and as a whole. For example, no one will suppose that Parliament intended the Act to be so construed as that a woman or child who would perish if refused admission ought to be refused, or that a man who would go back to certain execution for his religious opinions should be turned back; and yet if the very strictest letter of construction be placed on the Act, that might in some circumstances be the result. This, like all other Acts, ought to be reasonably construed . . . What would (be) the effect if they put a certain construction on the Act which Parliament intended to be humane as well as to provide an effective preventive against the immigration of undesirable aliens? To strain the construction of the Act might produce results which every Member of this House would deplore. It ought to be reasonably construed for the purpose of carrying out the fair spirit of the Act" (See also Sibley and Elias' "The Aliens Act and the Right of Asylum", London 1906, pp. 130-7).

This is in line with the rule of law, so often applied under the immigration laws, that statutes in derogation of individual liberty should be strictly construed.

As said by the C. C. A. in Redfern vs. Halpert, supra, in adopting the opinion of the lower court:

> "The immigration statutes are very drastic, deal arbitrarily with human liberty, and I consider they should be strictly construed."

As said by Mr. Justice Brandeis, speaking for the Court in the Bilokumsky case:

> "Deportation is a process of such serious moment that on all controverted matters, the executive officers should consider the evidence with close scrutiny."

As said by the N. Y. Appellate Division in Martin vs. Goldstein, supra, in applying what it describes as a well-recognized canon of construction:

> "A penal statute should always be liberally construed in favor of civil liberty, or, to adopt the language of an eminent text-writer upon this subject, 'Let everything in favor of power be closely construed, everything in favor of the security of the citizen and protection of the individual, be liberally and comprehensively interpreted, for the simple reason that power is power and therefore > able to take care of itself, as well as tending by its nature to increase, while the citizen may need protection' Lieber Herm C. 6 sec. 10."

It will be furthermore noticed that, unlike certain other provisions of the statutes, this section does not throw the burden of proof on the alien to establish the exemption, and the principle of expressio unius applies, to throw it on the Government instead. This regulation wholly violates this. The excluding clause in Sec. 3 reading:

> "persons whose tickets or passage is paid for with the money of another or who are assisted by others to come unless it is affirmatively and satisfactorily shown that such persons do not belong to one of the foregoing excluded classes," throws the burden of proof on assisted aliens, but shows that it was not intended by Congress in other cases.

It was so held in

> U. S. ex rel Castro vs. Williams 203 F. 155 at 156 Ward J.;
> U. S. ex rel Bilokumsky vs. Tod, 263 U. S. 149.

Compare 26 Opinions Attys. General 199; 410. Of course the burden of proof provision of the Chinese Exclusion Laws is here inapplicable (Bilokumsky vs. Tod, supra), nor is the recent provision, Sec. 23 of the Act of May 26th, 1924, applicable, which was enacted long after this case was decided, though it does throw the burden of proof on the alien. The report of the Committee of the House of Representatives which reported this clause in the Act of 1924 (Report No. 350 of the 68th Congress, 1st Session p. 19) says, in explanation of this clause:—

> "An alien seeking to enter the United States should not stand mute, but should assist the Government by showing admissibility if he can," showing that Congress merely aimed at the abuse of alleged aliens standing mute. (U. S. vs. Sing Tuck, 194 U. S. 161, 166; Bilokumsky vs. Tod, supra). To give it any greater effect as applied to star-chamber proceedings before boards of special inquiry, with counsel denied, would lead to the grossest kind of hardship and to serious abuses.

The regulation in question cannot therefore be justified and clearly transgresses the limitations placed upon the validity of departmental regulations to "reasonableness" and non-modification of the statute itself.

(c) The phraseology of the exemption clause and its legislative history clearly show that it was intended to exempt persons in relators' position. In fact, just such conditions as induced her to leave the Ukraine were the occasion of its enactment.

Reference has already been made to the fact that in 1906, when the House of Representatives passed a literacy test for immigrants, it avowedly adopted language based in the British Aliens Act of 1905, which exempted religious (and political) refugees (Congressional Record Vol. 40 Part 10, pp. 9164-7). In the British Act, the exemption was even from the likely-to-become-a-public-charge provision, there being no illiteracy test. In our House, it was first offered by Mr. Littauer and adopted as an exemption to the same clause, and then adopted as an amendment to the literacy test, when offered by Mr. Denby. The word "solely" appeared in the British Act, as qualifying > "seeking admission solely to avoid prosecution or punishment on religious or political grounds . . . or persecution involving danger of imprisonment or danger to life or limb on account of religious belief", and Mr. Littauer's amendment had wisely omitted this word, as motives are always mixed. Thereupon Mr. Gardner of the Immigration Committee, the chief sponsor of the literacy test, said (Cong. Record, Id. p. 9165):

> "Mr. Chairman, this amendment purports to be a copy of the amendment in the British aliens act which I hold in my hand. It is a > copy with a very important difference. The British aliens act says: 'in the case of an immigrant who proves that he is seeking admission to the country solely to avoid persecution' * * * Now, I want to say that if an exemption is carefully drawn to prevent the educational test applying to these unfortunates, I shall not oppose it if it be carefully guarded and drawn. * * * The educational test is a new test, and if it is adopted, it might be very proper to make this exception."

In support of his amendment, Mr. Littauer said (Id. p. 9164):

> "Mr. Chairman, our forefathers sought refuge on this continent to escape from civil and religious persecution. The very foundation of this Government was attachment to civil and religious liberty. That heritage never demanded or deserved greater recognition than on this day, when we are confronted with the horrors of the Russian situation from Kishinef to Bialystock (applause), horrors depicted in lurid statements in the press throughout the world, arousing the just sympathy of humanity. To refuse to the political or religious refugees who seek admittance to our country, to refuse to permit them to enjoy the blessings of our land, would prove that we are unworthy of our origin, and we do not hold in just esteem the heritage of our fathers." (applause)

Judge Goldfogle, also of the Immigration Committee, supported the Littauer amendment, stating, however, that it had been his intention to offer it as an amendment to the literacy test provision, but pointing out that discriminatory laws and practices, and not merely fear of personal violence, were involved. He said (Id. pp. 9164-5):

> "In many instances and in many places in Russia denied the right to enter the schools, and then again compelled because of cruel and restrictive laws to live under conditions in certain places that render education impossible to many, you must not be surprised that the refugees oft times come unable to read or write so as to pass an educational test."

Mr. Littauer accepted Mr. Gardner's suggestion, and inserted the word "solely," and it was adopted by the House as an amendment to the general provisions of the law, and then to the literacy test.

As pointed out, however, both the Littauer amendment and the entire literacy test were dropped in 1907, in favor of the substitute appointment of an "Immigration Commission", to investigate the question fully, and active consideration of the literacy test in Congress was postponed till 1912.

In the British Parliament, in debating this very Aliens Act, the language had been severely criticized as too narrow, and as not expressing the legislative intent on account of the use of this very word "solely". The Prime Minister, Mr. Arthur Balfour, said: (Parliamentary Debates, 4th Series Vol. 149, p. 1283):

> "We have heard a great deal of the possibility of Jews and others—for a moment I confine myself to the Jews—coming to this country in an absolutely destitute condition, and being rejected under this bill from our shores, although they were flying from religious or political persecution. Nobody desires that such a contingency should occur. * * * The great Jewish community, without > the smallest difficulty, can see to it that no man seeking the hospitality of this country should ever be rejected from these shores."

Mr. Asquith said (Vol. 145, p. 743):

> "I do not suppose that one in ten (of the refugees) could show that they were seeking admission solely for the purpose of avoiding persecution. We want words that are wider and more elastic, if we are to carry out the common object of us all—which is that these unfortunate persons, victims of social and political prejudices, shall in the future as in the past, receive free admission to our shores."

Sir Rufus Isaacs, now Lord Reading, said (Vol. 148, p. 1189):

> "If the proposed concession meant that the Home Secretary desired to exclude from the operation of the clause all who were forced to flee from their country because of persecution on religious grounds, the words were inept for that purpose. If, on the other hand, the right honorable gentleman did not mean to exclude such persons from the operation of the clause, the concession was illusory and not intended to have the effect desired by many members on either side of the House."

The U. S. Immigration Commission, in its Recommendations (Reports Vol. I, p. 45) said, while recommending the Literacy Test:

> "While the American people, as in the past, welcome the oppressed of other lands, care should be taken that immigration be such both in quality and quantity, as not to make too difficult the process of assimilation."

The phraseology adopted by the House Committee on Immigration in 1912 and its reasons, have already been quoted herein (ante, p. 27). In the Senate the same year, Senator Lodge who was in charge of the bill there, offered an amendment, employing the language of the House bill, intentionally confining the exemption to religious, as distinguished from political, refugees, and in answer to an inquiry from Senator Stone: "Where there is now religious persecution? Who would be subject to it?" (Cong. Record Vol. 48, p. 5020) said:

> Mr. Lodge: "I think there is something very much resembling religious persecution in Russia. I think also that, in the case of some of the Christians in the Turkish Dominions, there is religious persecution."

The "Hearings" of the House Committee on Immigration of 1912 (pp. 33-4) contain express statements from the Chairman of the Committee, Mr. Burnett, and Congressman Hayes, of their desire to exempt the Russian Jews from the literacy test as victims of religious persecution.

It was in this form, with the word "solely" in the Act and without any definition of "religious persecution" that President Taft vetoed the Literacy Test Bill on Feb. 14, 1913 (Senate Document 1087 of the 63rd Cong., 3rd Session). In the printed "Hearings" of the House Committee on Immigration in Dec. 1913, on H. R. 6060 (pp. 199-209), special attention was called by Mr. Max J. Kohler to the unsatisfactory character of an amendment using the word "solely," as recognized in England too, in the light of the very passages of the English debates there also quoted. Under date of Jan. 31, 1914, Secretary of Labor

Wilson also suggested an amendment omitting that word (House Document No. 689 of the 63rd Cong. 2nd Session p. 5). Pres. Wilson's veto of Jan. 28, 1915 (House Document No. 1527 of the 63rd Cong. 3rd Session) was based upon the inclusion of the literacy test and also specifically because of the non-exemption of political refugees, as a departure from hallowed American traditions concerning right of asylum. In the printed "Hearings" before the House Committee on Immigration of Jan. 20 and 21, 1916 (pp. 13-15, 25 and 32), Mr. Louis Marshall severely criticized the phraseology of this earlier exemption clause and particularly the use of the word, "solely", and suggested as a substitute, the modification of the earlier language by omitting the word "solely" and including the adopted definition of "religious persecution." He said:

> "Mark the word 'solely.' That means that must be the only purpose, the only desire, the only intent. You have heard of the persecution to which the Jews are subjected in Russia. But there are in Russia 6,000,000 Jews who live and have lived there, many of them for centuries, who are as much and perhaps longer residents there than perhaps some of the ruling classes, and yet who have been subjected to all kinds of discriminatory laws and regulations, the like of which have never been known in any part of the world at any period in the World's history. * * * No truthful man can say that he would not be coming here for two purposes, one, the primary purpose, without which he probably would never have moved—that of escaping from religious persecution—and secondly, to live, because if he said 'I came here without any money, and I expect to do nothing; I only came here to escape persecution,' he would be at once called an undesirable, be> cause he would become a public charge in almost no time, and therefore at once removed by the deportation agents of the Government. * * * I have sought to define persecution, because to the average mind, persecution might imply that there must have been some sudden outpouring of prejudice and violence, as on Bartholomew's Night, or as in the Russian pogroms of some few years ago. * * * The poor man, the immigrant of moderate means, who is driven to seek asylum here by the most vile and most oppressive persecution disclosed in the history of the world, as in the case of the Russian and the Roumanian Jew, the Protestant Finns and the Catholic Poles, cannot conscientiously say that he will not seek employment or engage in business, for that would not be the truth. He expects to work. He expects to find a life of usefulness and not one of idleness. But if he tells the truth and admits his purpose, if this bill is enacted, he will be told 'You are not here solely because you are seeking refuge from political and religious persecution. We are sorry for you, but you cannot be admitted.'"

These suggestions were adopted, and the Burnett Bill (H. R. 10384) which was ultimately passed over Pres. Wilson's veto in 1917, was reported by the House Committee (House Report No. 95 of the 64th Cong. 1st Session, Jan. 31, 1916, p. 6), phrased as it stands on our statute-books. In the Senate Committee, this same language was adopted, and the Committee Report (Senate Report No. 352 of 64th Cong. 1st Session) stated:

> "The exception to the illiteracy test (page 9, lines 10 to 18) has been changed from the language in which it was couched in H. R.

6060, materially clarified, and made acceptable to many who objected to the provision as previously drawn."

Right of asylum for the religious refugee has, of course, been a fundamental principle in English and American history. As said in Thomas Erskine May's "Constitutional History of England" (1880 Edition Vol. II, p. 283):

> "It has been a proud distinction for England to afford an inviolable asylum to men of every rank and condition, seeking refuge on her shores from persecution and danger in their own lands. England was a sanctuary to the Flemish refugees driven forth by the cruelties of Alva; to the Protestant refugees who fled from the persecution of Louis XIV; and to the Catholic nobles and priests who sought refuge from the bloody guillotine of revolutionary France. All exiles from their own country,—whether they flew from despotism or democracy,—whether they were kings discrowned, humble citizens in danger —have looked to England as their home. Such refugees were safe from the dangers which they had escaped. No solicitation or menace from their own government could disturb their right of asylum; and they were equally free from molestation by the municipal laws of England."

In

> Regina vs. Bernard, 8 State Trials N. S., 887 at 1055, 1061 (1850),

Chief Justice Campbell, in charging the jury, well said:

> "It has been the glory of this country to afford (right of asylum) to the persecuted > foreigner. That is a glory which I hope ever will belong to this country."

Scarcely a passage is to be found in the "Messages" of our Presidents, more frequently quoted than Jefferson's Presidential Message of 1801, which sounded the death-knell of the Alien and Sedition Laws, in his famous rhetorical question (Richardson's "Messages" I 331):

> "Shall we refuse to the unhappy fugitives from distress that hospitality which the savages of the wilderness extended to our fathers arriving in this land? Shall oppressed humanity find no asylum on these shores?"

See

"The Right of Asylum, With Particular Reference to The Alien" by Max J. Kohler in Vol. 51 of the "American Law Review" pp. 381-406 (1917).

The regulation of the Secretary of Labor, here criticized, has resulted in effect in eliminating this exemption provision from the statute. Scarcely a single person has been admitted to the country under this exception, despite the intent of Congress. In above-cited case of the order of discharge of the District Court was reversed, under peculiar facts, with the result that the decision has been wholly misconstrued by the administrative officials. There the alien had lived in the United States and left in July 1914, to bring his family over from Russia, but the war forced him to change his plans. His earning conditions improved in the section of Russia where he lived, and he decided to remain there in 1920, but had his passport renewed. In 1922 a pogrom occurred in his home town, his house was set afire and wife and children killed and he was wounded in the neck. Only Jews were attacked. He invoked the religious refugee exemption, but the excluding decision of the Board of Special Inquiry was affirmed by the C. C. A. (the District Court decision being reversed), on the ground that the Board was entitled to find that he did not come to the United States to escape religious persecution, but had previously planned to come. It would seem that the significant omission of the word "solely" was overlooked by the Court, but the facts were so peculiar that the case cannot serve as a precedent. The only case in which the courts afforded relief under this exemption, seems to be the case of

> U. S. ex rel Boxer vs. Tod, 294 F. R. 628

In re Liba Zibranetzska, a Russian Jewess of 19 and her young brother and sister, admitted without written opinion by Judge Lowell in Boston in Feb. 1924, who reversed the immigration authorities and found "there is religious persecution in Russia" (Boston "Herald", Feb. 13, 1924; N. Y. Times, Feb. 13, 1924).

As hereinbefore indicated, the facts testified to before the Board can, of course, often be augmented by resort to appropriate sources of information, and there is no authority for rejecting credible testimony, in immigration cases, even of such interested witnesses (U. S. ex rel Basile vs. Curran, 298 F. 951 Learned Hand J; U. S. ex rel Palermo 296 F. R. 345 C. C. A.; Ex. p. Petterson, 166 F. 536, 539; Gegiow vs. Uhl, 239 U. S. 3). As said by this Court in the courts should grant relief, where

> U. S. ex rel Catoni Tisi vs. Tod, 264 U. S. 131,

> "the finding was made in wilful disregard of the evidence to the contrary."

POINT III.

The regulation of the Secretary of Labor concerning method of administering the literacy test is unreasonable and illegal.

As shown in above quotation from the Regulations (ante, pp. 16-17) an extraordinary method has been devised to test the immigrant's ability to read:

> "The services of an interpreter shall be used for interpreting into spoken English as read, the printed matter read by the alien, so that the examining inspector may compare such interpretation with the slip of corresponding serial number containing the English translation of the same reading matter."

It is obvious that the alien is held responsible, under this scheme, for the blunders of the interpreter. If the interpreter retranslates badly, the alien is judged to have read incorrectly! Unless the interpreter is omniscient, variances in retranslating are bound to occur! Of course, there isn't the slightest authority for assuming that the interpreter's retranslation will be identical with the original English, or that the interpreter is infallible. In fact, in the letter of Secretary of Labor Nagel, which President Taft adopted as his grounds for vetoing the Literacy Test Act of 1913 (Senate Document No. 1087 of the 62nd Cong., 3rd Session p. 3) it was well said:

> "Finally, the interpreters will necessarily be foreigners, and with respect to only a very few of the languages or dialects, will it be possible for the officials in charge to exercise anything like supervision."

In

Montotaro Eguchi vs. U. S. 260 F. R. 144 C. C. A.

the court held that the literacy test requires reading understandingly

> "the law was not dealing with parrots, but with human beings, who are supposed to have some intelligence."

Even that construction of the statute is very doubtful in view of its terms and the congressional debates. There, however, the regulation required the alien to do simple things, called for by the slip handed to him. No such extraordinary regulation as this seems to have ever before been considered by the Courts, and it is submitted that it is unreasonable under the authorities concerning validity of departmental regulations, above cited, and illegal (p. 41). Compare authorities as to the copyrightability of translations, as involving originality and individuality in the translator (Leeser vs. Sklarz, 15 Fed. Cases 8276a; Shark vs. Rankin, 21 Fed. Cases, 12804; Stevenson vs. Fox, 226 Fed. Rep. 990) and the opinion of this Court with Mr. Justice Holmes as spokesman in Bleistein vs. Donaldson Co., 188 U. S. 239, at 249-50.

POINT IV.

The exclusion cannot be sustained on the theory that relators were likely to become public charges or are assisted aliens, and this question is not open here, because not raised by the petition for the certiorari.

Mrs. Waldman, according to the evidence, was able, through her work as seamstress, to support herself and her children; not merely at Proskurow, but also in the untried and difficult conditions prevailing in Eastern Galicia. There is no reasonable ground for supposing that she and her children are likely to become a public charge under the much more favorable conditions here. On the other hand, here she has a number of well-to-do relatives ready to aid her, and to give bonds against their becoming public charges. The lameness of the seven year old daughter Zenia is purely negligible, as bearing on such likelihood, though the physicians are required to certify every defect, however petty, so that the facts involved might be considered by the Board of Special Inquiry. In the recent case of

U. S. ex rel Engel vs. Tod, 294 F. R. 820 C. C. A., the Court properly treated total deafness as an immaterial factor on that issue, and pointed out that "assisted aliens" are not excluded by the act, but merely have to meet the burden of proof. Ever since the decision in it has been recognized, as held there as to minors, going to farmers, to whom they were apprenticed:

> "All the means of care or support that are provided for the passenger, and are available for his benefit, must be taken into account. The law intends those only, that are likely to 'become a public charge,' because they can neither take care of themselves, nor are under the charge or protection of any other person, who, by natural relation or by assumed responsibility, furnishes reasonable assurance that they will not become a charge upon the public" (Compare discussion of the English act, ante, pp. 44-5).

In

U. S. vs. Lipkis, 56 F. R. 427, 428,

the Court well said:

> "When an able-bodied workman comes to this country, who is able to take care of himself and his family, and is likely to procure remunerative work in his trade, it is not the practice to require a bond from him merely because he may have but little ready money, and upon the mere possibility that he may meet with some accident that may make him a cripple and thus render him and his family a public charge. For at the time of arrival he is not likely to become a public charge, his health, capacity for work, and the probability that he will obtain work, furnish ordinary and sufficient security, in the ordinary course of things, against any such liability."

Moreover, as was well said by the Committee of Congress which framed the original "assisted immigration" provision in the Act of 1891, in its Report (House Report No. 3472, p. IV, of the 52nd Congress, 2nd Session):

> "Assisted immigration is of two kinds: Those assisted by friends from this side of > the water is the best class of immigration, for they have relatives or friends here who will care for them in their untried surroundings. But the immigrant assisted from the other side usually has no friends here, and if any on the other side, their chiefest interest is in getting rid of what is likely soon to become a burden. The assisted ticket immigrant should not be made an excluded class, but our experience has been so unfortunate that it is prudent to have him show affirmatively that he does not belong to one of the excluded classes."

Under the principle of Gegiow vs. Uhl, 239 U. S. 3 (reversing 215 F. R. 573) these aliens cannot be properly regarded as likely to become public charges, and the trouble is that the Board of Special Inquiry still is influenced by the erroneous theory, there involved, that offers of assistance from persons not legally obligated to support the aliens, are to be disregarded, as negligible. It will be remembered that, following the decision in Gegiow vs. Uhl, supra, the Government confessed error in reversing 221 F. R. 358 (C. C. A.), where Hindoos were held excludable as likely to become public charges, on the fantastic theory that prejudice against them would be apt to prevent their securing employment. See also Williams vs. U. S. ex rel Klein, 206 F. R. 460 C. C. A.

Healy v. Backus, 243 U. S. 657,

Gegiow vs. Uhl, supra, has been repeatedly followed and applied since, to prevent findings of likelihood to become public charge without substantial evidence.

> Howe ex. U. S., 247 F. 292 C. C. A.
> Ex. p. Mitchell, 256 F. 229.
> Ex. p. Sakaguchi, 277 F. R. 913 C. C. A.

Moreover, as hereinbefore pointed out, the "likelihood to become a public charge" finding as to the children, is really based on the assumption that Mrs. Waldman was excluded (Greenwood ex. Frick, 233 F. R. 629 C. C. A.), and falls, if she is admitted. The letter from Assistant Secretary Henning to Senator Colt in the Record (p. 10) indicates that the Department was inclined to reverse the Board of Special Inquiry on the "likely-to-become-a-public-charge" issue, and deemed the literacy question the pivotal one, and this argument is strongly re-inforced by the offer of relatives to give bonds, referred to in the Petition (p. 9). The Circuit Court of Appeals in its opinion (pp. 21-2) therefore correctly said:

> "It remains only to state that the record leaves the case of Zenia in a position where it must be assumed that the decision to exclude was not affirmed by the Department and the Department may very well have disagreed with the local board as to whether or not the physical defect would interfere with the ability of Zenia to earn a living. The fate of the mother and the three children was placed entirely upon the question as to whether or not she could read Hebrew and Yiddish."

In any event, however, as hereinbefore pointed out (ante, p. 2) the question is not open here, because not one of the grounds on which the certiorari was applied for (Alice Bank vs. Houston Co., 247 U. S. 240).

POINT V.

The Order of the Circuit Court of Appeals should be affirmed.

October 15, 1924.

Respectfully submitted,

MAX J. KOHLER,
Of Counsel for Respondent.

TOD, COMMISSIONER OF IMMIGRATION, v. WALDMAN ET AL.

CERTIORARI TO THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT.

No. 95. Argued October 20, 21, 1924.—Decided November 17, 1924.

1. When it is found, in habeas corpus, that aliens, refused admission to the country and held for deportation, were denied a right of appeal to the Secretary of Labor, accorded by the Immigration Law and regulations, they should not therefore be discharged from custody and their bail be released, but the order should secure them the appeal and remand them to custody of the immigration authorities pending decision by the Secretary. P. 118.
2. THIS is a certiorari to a judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, discharging Mrs. Szejwa Waldman and her three minor children as relators in a writ of habeas corpus. The writ was issued by the District Court for the Southern District of New York, to Robert E. Tod, Commissioner of Immigration at Ellis Island. That court dismissed the petition and remanded the relators. Mrs. Waldman and her children, reaching New York from Europe, were, after examination, detained at Ellis Island on August 28, 1922, for deportation, on the ground that they were liable to become public charges if admitted to the United States, and also because the mother was an illiterate person. She appealed to the Department of Labor, which directed the case to be reopened before a Board of Special Inquiry for the purpose of according her a reëxamination regarding her ability to read Yiddish and Hebrew, with direction if she did not pass it, to deport her and her family, without further reference to the Department. She was reëxamined. She alleged in her petition that, although she was able to read in Yiddish, she was declared illiterate and she and her family were ordered deported on the next sailing, and were refused appeal from this decision. She further alleged that she and her family were seeking admission to the United States to avoid religious persecution in their home in Proskurow (once in Russia and now in the Ukraine), that she escaped from there in 1919, and after seventeen months spent in securing a passport to this country came here as a refugee, that, if she is deported from the United States, she must be returned to Proskurow and that she and her children would be in danger of death; that she and they, as refugees from religious persecution, are exempt by the immigration statute from the operation of the literacy test, but that their claim as such refugees had not been considered by the Commissioner of Immigration or the Secretary of Labor pursuant to the rules of the immigration bureau, although the facts were fully shown in her sworn evidence before the Commissioner. Her petition further alleged that relatives of hers, who are responsible citizens and residents of the United States, are willing to furnish a satisfactory bond that the Waldman family will not become public charges; indeed, that they are themselves willing and able to agree to support the family.

The return asked that the writ be quashed because it did not appear that there was no evidence before the Department upon which the warrant could be based, or that the issues sought by the petition now to be litigated in the court had not already been determined by the Department of Labor adversely to the aliens. The return exhibits the records of the Department and the evidence taken, and a medical certificate showing that one of the daughters, Zenia Waldman, is afflicted with a dislocation of the left hip, causing shortening of the left leg and lameness, which may affect her ability to earn a living; and that for this, and for failure of the mother to pass the language test, all the aliens were properly ordered excluded; that on appeal, after a careful consideration, the Second Assistant Secretary directed that the case be reopened before a Board of Special Inquiry; that another hearing was given by a different Board of Special Inquiry, the minutes of the prior hearing being made a part of the evidence taken and other evidence introduced, a copy of which is annexed; and that the board duly and unanimously reaffirmed the former order of exclusion. The return concludes:

"The proofs and record of the proceedings before mentioned having been duly transmitted to him, the Secretary of Labor, after carefully considering the evidence presented in the record, duly affirmed the excluding decision of the board and directed the deportation of the aliens herein; and for the cause of the detention of the said aliens complained of in the petition herein, deponent says that the said aliens are and since the receipt of said writ of habeas corpus have been held under and in obedience to said writ".

The prayer was that the writ of habeas corpus be dismissed and the aliens remanded to the custody of the Commissioner, to be dealt with in accordance with the order of exclusion.

The Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the failure of the return to set out the details of the test as to the knowledge of Mrs. Waldman in Yiddish and Hebrew, at the first and second hearing, was improper; that the test directed in both Hebrew and Yiddish, which the statute recognized as different languages, was a double one for which there was no warrant in the statute. Without stressing these defects, the court, pointing out that by § 17 of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917, c. 29, 39 Stat. 874, 887, and regulations duly issued thereunder, when a case is referred back to a Board by the Bureau or Department, in order that additional evidence may be taken, and a new decision is rendered by the Board, the reopened hearing shall be "of the same nature and be subject to the same conditions, limitations, and privileges as an original hearing", held that the departmental order reopening the case was illegal in that it took away the right of appeal after the second examination, and that the warrant of deportation was void. The Circuit Court of Appeals further held that the record so left the case of the child Zenia that it must be assumed that the decision to exclude her was not affirmed by the Department of Labor and that the Department may well have disagreed with the local board as to whether or not the physical defect would interfere with the ability of Zenia to earn a living. The order of the District Court was reversed with directions to enter an order discharging the relators and releasing their bail.

An application for a rehearing was made to the Circuit Court of Appeals to modify its order so as not to discharge the relators and their bail, but to direct that the trial court might itself proceed to hear the issues and determine the admissibility of the appellants. The Circuit Court of Appeals declined to make this modification, but said that, as the judgment was not res judicata, the executive authorities might rearrest the relator and institute further proceedings to test the legality of her being in the country. It is the discharge of the relators and their bail by the Circuit Court of Appeals of which the Government complains.

Mr. Assistant Attorney General Donovan, with whom Mr. Solicitor General Beck and Mr. Harry S. Ridgely were on the brief, for petitioner.

Where the trial court, on habeas corpus, finds the alien has not been accorded a fair hearing, it is its duty to determine the right of the alien to enter the United States, and this duty exists not only where the right of entry is based upon claimed citizenship but equally where the right of entry is based upon the claim, as here, that the alien is able to meet the literacy or other requirements of the immigration laws. Kwock Jan Fat v. White, 253 U. S. 454; Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276; Hoey Lum Qung v. Johnson, 299 Fed. 246; Wong Wing Sing v. Nagle, 299 Fed. 601.

Mr. Max J. Kohler for respondents.

MR. CHIEF JUSTICE TAFT, after stating the case as above, delivered the opinion of the Court.

We think that the complaint of the Government is well founded. The petitioners in the writ of habeas corpus were aliens who had not been legally admitted to the country—that is, neither the immigration authorities nor the court had held that they were entitled to admission. The immigration authorities had ordered their deportation. The Circuit Court of Appeals merely found that in the course of the examination by the immigration authorities the relators had not been given a fair opportunity to appeal to the Secretary of Labor as provided by the statute. This denial of appeal did not give to them a right to admission to the country. In the due and orderly disposition of the writ of habeas corpus, relators should not have been discharged and their bail released, but the order should have been framed so as to secure the benefit of the appeal to the relators, to which the court by its decision had held them entitled. To discharge them was to take them out of the proper custody of the government authorities pending their admission or exclusion, was to entail upon the Government the affirmative and initial duty of re-arresting them and was improperly discharging the security for their response to any lawful order of the immigration authorities. The mere fact that by re-arrest the Government would not be confronted by any judgment of res judicata did not suffice. The power of the court in such a case is indicated by § 761 of the Revised Statutes in reference to habeas corpus. The section provides that a court or justice or judge shall proceed in a summary manner to determine the facts of the case by hearing the testimony and arguments and thereupon to dispose of the party as law and justice require. The law and justice here required under the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals was that the case should be sent to the District Court with instructions to remand the petitioners to the custody of the immigration authorities, to await the result of the appeal from the judgment of deportation to the Secretary of Labor.

Counsel for the Government urge that under three decisions of this Court, Chin Yow v. United States, 208 U. S. 8, 13, Kwock Jan Fat v. White, 253 U. S. 454, and Ng Fung Ho v. White, 259 U. S. 276, the question with respect to which the petitioners have not been given a fair hearing should now be remanded to the District Court for its decision. Without saying that the circumstances might not arise which would justify such a variation in the order from that which we now direct, we do not think that the course taken in the cases cited should guide us here. In those cases the single question was whether the petitioner was a citizen of the United States before he sought admission, a question of frequent judicial inquiry. Here the questions are technical ones involving the educational qualifications of an immigrant in a language foreign to ours, and the medical inquiry as to effect of a physical defect on the probability of a child's being able to earn a living or of becoming a public charge. The court is not as well qualified in such cases to consider and decide the issues as the immigration authorities. The statute intends that such questions shall be considered and determined by the immigration authorities. It would seem better to remand the relators to the hearing of the appeal, by the Secretary and his assistants, who have constant practice and are better advised in deciding such questions.

We concur with the Circuit Court of Appeals in its criticism of the record in this case in that it does not set out more fully the details of the test applied in the examinations. The record is defective also in not showing the definite rulings of the Commissioner or the Board of Inquiry on the issues made by Mrs. Waldman in her evidence. This made clear her claim that she and her children were refugees from religious persecution relieving her from an educational test; but no finding appears in the record on this point either by the Board or the Department on appeal. The mere implication that the claim must have been passed on adversely to her because the language test was applied is not enough. If the necessary finding was in fact made, it should be made part of the record. We agree with the Circuit Court of Appeals also that the absence from the record of any finding by the Department on appeal as to the issue whether the lameness of Zenia, one of the children, affected her ability to earn a living or made her likely to become a public charge, is a defect. The inquiry and finding should have been made. If made, the record should disclose it. If not made, the inquiry should be made and the finding recorded.

We see no reason, therefore, why upon the appeal which it is now decided the Secretary of Labor must afford the relators, he should not consider and make a definite finding on the issues made by the petition, to wit, first, whether the relators are not relieved from the test as to language because they are refugees from religious persecution; second, whether, if it be necessary, a proper test as to the reading knowledge of Yiddish only, which Mrs. Waldman had, was sufficient to meet the requirements of the statute, and, if not, to order another; and, third, whether the lameness of Zenia Waldman is likely to affect her ability to earn her living or to make her a public charge. The order of the Circuit Court of Appeals is reversed and modified in accordance with this opinion, with instructions to remand the petitioners to the custody of the immigration authorities to await the hearing on the appeal before the Secretary of Labor. Failing the granting and hearing of the appeal within thirty days after the coming down of the mandate herein, the relators and their bail are to be discharged. Mahler v. Eby, 264 U. S. 32, 46.

Reversed and remanded to the District Court for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.
